DRAGNET LAID FOR PROWLERS

Negro Burglar Shooting at Resident Not Found IDENTIFY WHITE MAN

Youths Claim He Held Them Up On Road

Police and special officers patrolled all portions of the city all last night in an effort to apprehend the prowlers who have terrorized many sections of the city the past week with 12 homes entered and one negro shooting twice at a householder.

No arrests were made Saturday following the entry of four homes by burglars Friday night.

No Arrests Last Night
The police department silently spent the day arranging a dragnet which will bring in every idle and suspicious character to the police station, Police Chief Covington said.

Officers have several clues and suspicious negroes are being closely watched, they said. The watch last night was engaged in by a large part of the police force. All parts of the city were included in the surveillance campaign of the officers.

Up to three this morning no reports of prowlers had been telephoned to police headquarters.

White Suspect Held
Arrest of a white man Saturday night whom two youths from Port Neches identified as the one they told police held them up Friday night, took $25 in cash, and then drove away with their Ford car, was the only development in the series of burglaries and hold-ups of the past week.

The man was arrested by Detective Y. Q. Brizendine following a description given by the victims. The car was found deserted on the Beaumont road Saturday morning, officials said.

Y.M.B.L. READY FOR FAIR DRIVE

Season Ticket Sale to Be Rushed Monday

Drive to sell 4,000 season tickets to Port Arthur's first annual fair will begin Monday morning with 15 teams from the Young Men's Business League under the leadership of Perry Pace who states the quota should be oversold in two days.

Pace with President A. C. Reichle, Secretary C. K. DeBusk and other Y. M. B. L. officials have through several special meetings this week planned the drive in detail. Special salesmen have been appointed to dispose of tickets to employees at the Texas Company, Texas Company terminals and the Gulf company. Monday will be spent in this work.

Business Section Zoned
Tuesday the drive will be carried to the city proper. The business section has been zoned out among the team captains and these have prepared lists of prospects. Sale of tickets will also be extended to the residential sections.

The tickets for the first fair have been put at the lowest possible figure, fair officials explain. These state the Port Arthur fair is one of the major expositions of Texas now.

The other five such fairs have a standing entrance fee of 50 cents. To sell the fair to Port Arthur the first year is the object of the ticket drive.

Mark of Citizenship
For this reason a season book of tickets with 12 entrance passes will be sold for $1.25 each.

Those who do not have season tickets will be charged 25 cents admission to the grounds.

"We know Port Arthur people are going to buy season tickets for the fair without hesitation. Port Arthur's future fairs depend on the way in which this initial attempt goes over.

To have a season ticket will mean value received for one of the big expositions this year. It will also be a mark of progressive citizenship to possess one," Chairman Pace stated.

AMERICAN LEGION HOUSE BIDS BOOM

New plans for the American Legion club house scheduled to be built during the month of October at the present site at Shreveport and Lake Shore, will be presented at the regular bi-monthly meeting next Wednesday night, Commander J. L. Dunn announced.

Bids for the club house are coming in daily and these will be considered at the Wednesday session along with other important items of business, the commander says.

British Labor Government Nears Fall

COMMONS DEFY PRIME MINISTER

MacDonal Fights for Support of Russ Treaty TO DEMAND ELECTION

Declares He May Resign to Carry Fight to People

DERBY, England, Sept. 27.—In a fighting speech, Ramsay MacDonald declared this afternoon, that he will stake the labor government's fate upon ratification of the two treaties signed with Russia last month. Developments indicate the labor government's fall is imminent.

"If commons refuses to ratify the treaties, commons had better be prepared to measure us," the prime minister said. "I do not think the country wants a break but if forced we will appeal to the people."

MacDonald defied the conservatives and liberals who have been active in attacking the government and announced flatly that he would resign and demand a general election if the treaties, which have been the principal bone of contention, failed to pass commons.

Political observers feel that the labor government is practically at the end of its rope. MacDonald and his colleagues have faced practically insurmountable difficulties with a majority in the house against them and a series of domestic and international complications instantly coming up since they took office.

Trend Toward R. M. LaFollette Is Seen

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Votes are swinging toward Robert M. LaFollette, Solomon Levitt, state treasurer of Wisconsin, said on his return here today to National LaFollette headquarters after a ten-day speaking tour that took him to New York and Boston.

"Labor is solid behind LaFollette, the big eastern and western cities," he continued, "and many people in conservative sections who at first regarded Senator LaFollette as an anarchist, have decided to vote for him."

AVIATOR RUST ARRIVES HERE

Local Birdmen May Put On Fair Exhibition

From literal trail blazing in the skies over the west, F. H. Rust, aviator, arrived in Port Arthur late Saturday afternoon to join F. S. Owen, local aviator, and confer with officials of Port Arthur's First Annual Fair about putting on an aerial bombardment and fireworks display during fair week, October 14 to 19.

Rust landed his plane at the Port Arthur landing field built by Owen at Bland's bend, on North Procter street, and the two birdmen will make trips Sunday for sightseeing passengers, they said Saturday night.

Both Owen and Rust hold officers' commissions in the U. S. aviation corps, and saw service during the World war in the flying branch of the service.

One of the features of Rust's aerial fire works display is the explosion of giant light bombs at a mile high altitude, producing 100,000 candle power illumination, or enough for spectators to read newspaper by, according to reviews of the display put on in other cities. Thunder and lightning bombs, colored fireworks displays, silver trails and magnesium flares also are put on by Rust with his airplane.

Four Port Arthur Flappers Are Popularly Proclaimed Perfect

Misses Ichart, Russell, Cail and Poole, in Representative Roles Winners in Field of Nine Flappers can get anything they want in Port Arthur.

This was demonstrated Saturday night when nine special and admitted flappers, not ashamed of the fact themselves and of whom the audience was of the same opinion, came out, saw, and conquered a packed house.

In the parlance of the flappers themselves they "knocked 'em cold," that is the audience, collectively and individually.

Miss Lucie Ichart was adjudged by the audience the most popular flapper of last night's contest of nine entries. Miss Ichart represented the bathing girl flapper. She stepped daintily from the theatre wings in a brilliant red wool bathing suit, her hair of red matching her short red silk hose and suit. "Rain No More" was the piano accompaniment. Even a bathing suit, apparently nobody wanted to see her get wet.

Second place went to Miss Lucille Russell as the school girl flapper. The first to appear, this miss was jaunty, defiant, swaggering, in rolled hose, sport skirt, and blouse.

Secure $5,000. But Leave Loot In Haste

TAYLORVILLE, Ill., Sept. 27.—Sheriff's posse tonight scoured the highways of Central Illinois for an automobile load of bank robbers who today terrorized Kinkaid, Illinois, robbed the Kinkaid Trust and Savings bank of $5,000 and fled for the lives without their loot before the attack of citizens using shotguns.

Five persons were injured in the melee. Bruce Shaw, president of the bank who foiled the robbers by locking the vault containing a $90,000 payroll, was shot and beaten over the head.

36 Hours Needed, Estimate

The entire length of the Isonzo rested on the bottom of the canal Saturday afternoon as the pumping work started. The stern was submerged and water covered practically all of the main deck and rails except the forward end. Immediately after the ship was brought over and cables made fast to hold her in position, the tangled mass of wreckage and some of the oil-soaked deck cargo of lumber remaining on the ship was removed by men working in boats and wading around the decks of the ship. Just forward of the bridge row boats could float entirely across the rails and main deck of the vessel.

Port holes extending around the stern of the Isonzo and other openings in the ship partly under water are being closed by divers before pumps start getting the water out of the after end of the vessel. Hatch openings also are being battened down as the pumping-out work progresses.

While none of the government engineers directing the work of salvaging the Isonzo would venture an opinion as to how long it will be before the vessel can be refloated, Port Arthur marine men estimated about 36 hours will be required for the task.

FIRST EXCLUSIVE PICTURE OF ISONZO THE MOMENT SHE WAS RIGHTED

ISONZO, marked with the arrow, upper center, is coming over on even keel; in lower right corner, set on piling foundations in water-soaked marsh, the battery of six winches with the water filled tracks cut through the grass to the canal bank by the 25,000 feet of heavy steel cables attached to the ship are seen tugs, dredge Kimble, divers' boat, water barge, houseboat, derrick barge and engineers' yacht are clustered in the canal about the Isonzo. Sightseers' automobiles line the canal bank and edge of the highland. Inset shows Isonzo, main deck awash and stern submerged after being pulled over by windlasses and cables Saturday afternoon. Water covered midships portion gives Isonzo the appearance of two ships in group view.

Every Means to Be Taken to Rush Removal of Hulk From Canal. U. S. Engineer Clarke Declares

Work of pumping out the Italian motorship Isonzo, started Saturday afternoon about three o'clock, took a half hour after the vessel had been pulled over on nearly even keel. Operations were under way at daybreak today.

Pumping out the Isonzo, continued until after dark Saturday night, is the last step in the plans made and carried out by U. S. government engineers for refloating the ship and clearing the waterway for traffic, blocked for 12 days since the vessel caught fire and sank early Tuesday of last week in the canal above the locks.

Centrifugal Pumps at Work
Shortly after noon Saturday the battery of six winches and rigging of 25,000 feet of steel cables heaved the Isonzo over to a position nearly upright, as near even keel as government engineers deemed safe to bring the vessel, Major J. L. Schley, U. S. engineer of the Galveston district, said.

Getting steam power from the government engineers' tug boat Ionian, two centrifugal pumps on a small derrick barge began throwing out water from the forecastle of the Isonzo through two six-inch hose lines lowered into the flooded bow of the ship. Over 1,000 sand bags were brought out from Port Arthur late Saturday afternoon to be used in sealing the covering over the hatch to No. 1 hold on the Isonzo, pumped out after the forecastle.

The films were developed and the view shown above selected, with the inset showing the almost righted vessel in bold relief, as being representative of all operations in the mechanical process of righting the Isonzo.

NEWS SCORES A PICTORIAL SCOOP

While other Jefferson county papers were forced to content themselves with ground views of the Isonzo, The News scored a clear beat by securing the first and only airplane view of the wrecked Isonzo at the precise moment the vessel was righted by a battery of puffing steam winches on the canal bank.

To do this for The News, Pilot F. S. Owen, Port Arthur aviator formerly with the army air service, swooped seven times around the wreck, dropping as low as 100 feet while W. D. Post, Port Arthur photographer, hung on almost with his teeth while making the shots. Post clambered clear over the edge of the fuselage while the plane, expertly maneuvered by Owen, dived and dipped, hung suspended and dropped, climbed, straightened out and took the deep bank back, several times nearly losing his precarious hold on the machine.

CHOOSING OF THE FAIR SPEAKER IS A big problem of the minds of fair officials, they said Saturday, and they will now turn their attention to other important matters pending.

Dr. George Butte, candidate for governor of Texas on the republican ticket against Mrs. Miriam Ferguson, the democratic nominee, will open Port Arthur's first annual fair on the afternoon of Tuesday, Oct. 11.

President Gene Gifford of the Fair association stated Saturday afternoon that Dr. Butte had wired his acceptance of the invitation to formally open the exposition. Alvin Owsley of Denton, former national commander of the American Legion, and Gov. Pat Neff also have been asked to participate in the opening program, but because of previous engagements wired their inability to attend.

Fair officials state in the choosing of Dr. Butte to deliver the fair opening speech they felt there had been selected a man capable from an oratorical and scholastic standpoint to fill the position. Gifford said Saturday a strong committee of prominent Port Arthurians will be appointed to entertain Dr. Butte while he is in the city.

Not the slightest evidence exists to indicate any presence of the hoof and mouth disease adjacent to Port Arthur or in Jefferson county, Dr. O. L. Baker, sanitary inspector, declared Saturday night. Baker declared he was keeping close to the situation to report any case that might come up for suspicion and a livestock men nowhere to co-operate to their fullest extent in reporting any mysterious malady among animals.

Such a quarantine would mean the loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars to cotton and grain interests and other exporters.

Situation Grave
Houston, Galveston and parts of Brazoria and Fort Bend counties were only beginning to awaken this morning to the gravity of the situation thrust upon them by an outbreak of the hoof and mouth disease here.

Still another outbreak of the epidemic, the third, was reported in Harris county late Saturday afternoon. The most recent report of the dread disease comes from 30 miles across the city of Houston to the west of the first infected area.

Federal and state officials who left immediately for the scene of the new outbreak have made no report. Barstons to orders from Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Harris and Galveston counties and the affected sections of Brazoria and Fort Bend counties east of the Brazos river were under rigid quarantine tonight.

Neff to Direct Rangers
One hundred and fifteen men were enforcing the quarantine restrictions last night. In addition rangers, under orders of Governor Pat Neff of Texas, are expected to arrive at the center of the infected area Sunday to augment the county border patrol.

Governor Neff will take charge upon his arrival Sunday.

Headed by Marion Innes, government expert of the hoof and mouth disease, who directed government activities during the California outbreak forty government inspectors, fourteen of whom saw service in the California epidemic are expected to arrive in Houston Monday.

All adjoining states are expected to quarantine against Texas products at once. Louisiana Saturday declared an embargo against the shipment of livestock from Texas into that state.

Declaring an emergency in the present outbreak, the Harris county commissioners court Saturday vested full power in County Judge Chester Bryan and County Auditor H. L. Washburn to issue any orders or make any expenditures necessary in stamping out the disease.

Drastic orders were given the members of the Houston police department in co-operating to stamp out the plague. All animals in the city will be impounded. Watering troughs have been cut off and mounted officers patrolling the districts adjacent stricken district must have their hands disinfected.

Poison Cats and Dogs
Poison was distributed about the area to keep dogs and cats from spreading the disease.

In preventing the spread of the disease to humans, housewives were asked to boil all milk before using and a warning of a possible milk shortage was also issued. The eating of raw fruits other than oranges and lemons was also taboo.

Not a single product of the soil can be moved from the counties under quarantine.

Thus far travelers leaving the city by train have not been fumigated. Fumigating stations and dipping vats, however, are being erected on the main highways of the border counties, for the disinfection of motorists and their cars.

The epidemic first became evident in the herd of Dr. William States Jacobs, several days ago. A secretive investigation by state and federal authorities was carried.

Spread From Brazil Shipment
The disease apparently spread from the herd of Dr. Jacobs to the ranch of Tom C. Dunn Jr., separated only by a railroad track.

A total of between eleven and twelve hundred cattle, comprising the two herds have been condemned and will be slaughtered probably Sunday.

The disease is believed to have been brought into the country through Galveston with the importation of 125 bulls from Brazil. The bulls were imported into Texas over the protests of state officials, it is said.

Rangers Join Federal Officers In Zones

HOUSTON, Texas, Sept. 28.—Sunday—Orders were expected here today to close the port of Houston as the result of an epidemic of hoof and mouth disease which flowed into further activity Saturday afternoon.

Similar orders are expected to reach Galveston and Texas City. Foreign countries are expected to take similar action against the three Texas ports within the next day or two.

Such a quarantine would mean the loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars to cotton and grain interests and other exporters.

Activities Indicate First Fair Here Will Compare Favorably With Best in Texas

LOWER RATES TO AID FETE

Additional Structures to Be Built On Pier

Fair activities the past week have seen a host of developments indicating Port Arthur's first attempt for a yearly exposition in keeping with such held annually in all Texas' larger cities is being received with wholehearted co-operation by all classes of the citizenship here.

This was the statement Saturday night from fair headquarters by President Gene Gifford and Secretary A. L. Burge.

Among the constructive advancements of the past week are the following:

Road Boosts Fair
The Kansas City Southern and Southern Pacific railways announced Wednesday excursion rates had been granted of a fare and a third round trip from neighboring points of a large radius in western Louisiana and southern Texas.

Decision made definitely to include as one of the major night events of the fair an exposition of a queen's ball which will bring princesses and duchesses from a number of neighboring cities in Texas and Louisiana.

Letting of contracts for the building of two more structures at the fair grounds to take care of the large number of exhibitors who contracted for about twice as much space as originally planned.

Style Show Plans
Meetings of the style show committee of the Retail Merchants association which decided to have some 35 merchants participating in a style exhibit which is to be planned and staged on the basis of big eastern projects of this nature.

Securing of Dr. George Butte, candidate for governor, to make the official opening address which are to be erected and on which work has already begun will be another general exhibition structure and one for pet, livestock and poultry entries. The concessions committee has abandoned the idea of having any portion of the exhibits in tents. The two new buildings will make four in all. Building of these has left a little exhibit space which can still be secured, Karl Mallen, chairman of the concession committee states.

World Shows Coming
Dodson's world shows which will furnish attractions for the midway, is recognized as one of the three big amusement companies of the world. Bringing 30 different shows, seven riding devices, two brass bands, a lot of concessions and special features the fair committee say there is absolutely no worry about the amusement end of the project.

Another feature will be the auto show. Space in one of the exhibit buildings has been rented by auto men who will surround the building interior with the latest makes of all popular brands of cars. Mart May and E. R. Baker as chairmen of the auto show have enlisted all Port Arthur auto dealers to enter their cars.

A Select Committee
The queen's ball will be under the direction of a select committee which is planning one of the big social events of the year. The affair will be staged on the same general lines as a similar event held last July 4, a year ago at Port Arthur's quarter centennial.

President Gifford states about 40 men will be needed to help at various times during the fair in various capacities. Call for these will be sent out as he states.

Friday night of this week a general mass meeting of all fair directors, committee chairmen and members will be held at the Chamber of Commerce and Shipping.

FLAPPERS

winner of the third prize, Miss Minnie Call, as the Spanish flapper. Miss Emmie Zoole won fourth place as the 20th century girl. With true modernity the fourth entry intrigued with her costume, walk and smile. A veil over a chic hat, a well designed black frock, a light fur piece around the neck in conformity with the rest of her apparel, made an appealing picture.

There were others, the jazz girl who came in with a halo of costuming that gives chaperones the feeling they are underpaid. The old fashioned flapper, as she would have been, in a blazing orange hoop skirt, pants and carrying a picture fan. The girl of today with dark coat suit, carrying a cane or swagger stick with practiced grace, wearing double bracelets and her head adorned with a smart toupe. The sophisticated college girl, yet still a flapper, with the air of having both sense but not having lost the female sense. She in a checked dress and conservative yet flapperish inspired the high brows and subdued the cheek.

The judges found they had an intricate task but came through unscathed. They were Bert Hughes, Harold M. Hoe and H. E. McBride. All of the judges wore glasses and added great dignity to the flapper setting.

Before the contest held at the Strand theatre, a "Pin solo" was enjoyed by Miss Julia Jack Routh. Awards to winners of the flapper contest was first, a $200 evening dress by Goldberger's; second, pair of shoes from H. Keith's; third, underwear from Hodges and fourth a hat from the Vogue.

SPECIAL SERVICE AT BAPTIST CHURCH

A special service will be held at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the First Baptist church, Fifth street and Shreveport, with Rev. Dr. L. E. Next Sunday afternoon at the 3 o'clock service, Dr. Lee will give a detailed account of the recent troubles in Herring, Ill., Culp said.

Lake Sabine Being Used By Tugs First Time in 20 Years

Blocked Ship Channel Cause of Lighter Craft to Resort to Shallow Water for Shipping

For the first time in nearly 20 years, Lake Sabine is being used as an artery for commerce with light draft barges and tugs plying between the mouth of the Neches and Sabine rivers across the lake to Sabine Pass on the south.

Blocking of the ship channel above the locks is causing the small craft to return to Lake Sabine again after a lapse of many years that have followed the dredging of the waterway from Sabine Pass to the Neches and Sabine rivers, veteran shipping men in the vicinity point out.

In the early days considerable freight was barged across the lake from the old export pier to the deep water at Sabine Pass where sea-going vessels put in for cargoes. Then came the dredging of the ship canals, and the old export pier fell into disuse and deep shipping moved over the country to Port Arthur, Orange and Beaumont, using the dredged canals, and Lake Sabine was deserted save for boats going back and forth from Louisiana and shell barges.

marine superintendent of the Magnolia company, said. When definite word is given out by the engineers that the time the canal will be clear, the Atlantic Refining company's tanker Habira may be shifted down the Neches river to the company's terminals, according to reports in Port Arthur marine circles.

Six Ships at Sabine

Under the present schedule for moving the ships held up by the blockade two ships now lying at the Texas Company's Port Arthur docks, the British steamships Knoxkier and Quebec City will go to the company's Port Neches terminals, and the Norwegian steamship S. R. Land will proceed to Beaumont. Six ships anchored at Sabine will be moved up to Neches and Sabine river terminals, and four vessels riding at anchor off Sabine bar, the tankers Haldhill, Bohemian Club, W. E. Hutton and W. F. Burdell, all destined for Smith's Reef, will go up to the Pure Oil company terminals on the second day. The vessels at Sabine are the cargo ship Aylestone, for Orange; Chester Sun, for the Atlantic Refining company's terminals at Atreco; the British tanker Wyndie and American tanker Solano, for Smith's Reef; and the Bloomfield, the brilliant barge, all for Beaumont. Two schooners loading out at the Lumber-Moore lumber company's dock at Orange, the Edw. and B. Wiglow and Hope Sherwood, have not completed their cargoes, according to reports here Saturday.

The Transmarine corporation steamship Sajnaco is due in Port Arthur Sunday and will take fuel at the Texas Company terminals upon arrival instead of waiting until the south-bound cargo is discharged at Beaumont, as is usually the case with the corporation's vessels, Captain Meek said Saturday.

ISONZO

our goes along, it will be impossible for any definite word to be given out as to when the ship canal will be cleared and reopened to traffic," S. W. Clarke, government engineer in the Sabine district, declared Saturday afternoon. The engineers expect to advise shipping interests definitely regarding the opening of the canal at the earliest possible time, Clarke said.

In order to reduce the delay to ships as much as possible, shipping men said the engineers have advised them that instead of unstringing the sets of cables thrown around the Isonzo and made fast on both banks of the canal, these strands will be cut with acetylene torches and pulled out as soon as the wrecked ship is refloated. Considerable saving of time is expected to result from this action, marine officials said.

Two Minor Accidents
Only two minor accidents occurred to the elaborate steel rigging Saturday after the steam windlasses commenced pulling the Isonzo over. One of these was the breaking of one of the pulleys, and the other resulted when one of the steam winches slipped out of position. Silently, except for the rattle of the windlasses as a puffing of the steam, the capsize vessel came slowly over toward even keel.

After the final clean-up of the vast equipment assembled by the government engineers on the canal bank for the task of salvaging the Isonzo, the piling driven into the almost bottomless, water-soaked marsh land to give the battery of winches a firm foundation will have to be abandoned, according to the powerful windlasses firmly enough in the marsh land to withstand the terrific strain of heaving the Isonzo over was among the most difficult problems the engineers had to overcome. A pile-driver brought up the canal on a barge was rolled across the marsh to drive the foundation piling for the winches, fixed in a line about 300 feet from the edge of the canal.

Preparation Thorough
Thoroughness of the preparations made by the U. S. government engineers for the task of raising the Isonzo is reflected in the reports of the equipment assembled for the salvage work. Nearly five miles of steel cables, ranging in size from five-eighths to one inch, and one and one-quarter inches in diameter were actually strung around the ship, through the pulleys and out to the windlasses, and thousands of feet additional cable, with steel pulleys, were on the ground at the scene of the wreck ready for use in case of emergency.

Each of the six steam winches fixed on the canal bank was capable of producing 20 times its original power through the system of blocks and tackles rigged up with the steel cables. This power, it is estimated, was three times the amount actually necessary for pulling the Isonzo over. Pipe lines were run from the U. S. government engineer's tug Ionia, the Gulf Refining company's tug Delano and the government dredge Kimble to supply the battery of windlasses with steam.

Under Full U. S. Supervision

Scores of men manning the winches and the steam controls on the tugs and dredge were trained to set the machinery in operation at signals from a small whistle rigged up on the after end of the tug Ionia, where Assistant Engineer Stevenson took up his station for controlling the salvaging operations. At the first blast the steam valves were opened to let steam into the pipe lines. With the second blast the battery of six winches were started, slowly, and speeded up for the heaving at the third whistle blast. Along the length of the cables stretching across the ground, at each of the pulleys, men were stationed to keep kinks out of the cables and hold the pulleys in right positions as the strain of pulling came.

The entire salvaging operations at the Isonzo are under the supervision and control of the U. S. government engineers, for the Galveston and Sabine districts, including Major J. L. Schley, of Galveston; S. W. Clarke, U. S. engineer in the Sabine district, and W. T. Stevenson, of Galveston, assistant engineer. Inspection of the salvaging operations were made Saturday by Major B. R. Browne of Galveston, in charge of the floating plant and disbursements in the Galveston district; and R. R. Gillette, of Galveston, assistant engineer.

Engineers' Work Praised

High marine officials in the Sabine district and prominent shipping men were among the throngs of sightseers at the wrecked ship Saturday. All of the marine men and shippers were outspoken in their praises of the work accomplished by the U. S. government engineers in salvaging the Isonzo. Among the officials at the scene of the salvaging operations were George N. Bliss, marine superintendent of the Gulf Refining company, Port Arthur; Thomas Fenlon, marine superintendent of the Magnolia Petroleum company, Beaumont; J. E. Crockett, general superintendent of the Atlantic Refining company terminals; L. L. Ashire, of the Sabine Pass, Walter and Thowing company; E. M. Black, of the D. M. Picton Towing company; Captain Teddy Clark, of the Texas Company; Captain Dennis Wood and Captain West, all of the Sabine Pilots association; P. C. Pfeiffer, Port Arthur stevedore; Ernest Pasch, Port Arthur representative of the Royal Italian navy; Captain Ventura, master of the Isonzo, and the chief engineer of the vessel.

Entire Salvage Cost Charged To Ship's Owners

A flare-back from a donkey boiler in the engine room on the Isonzo early on the morning of Tuesday, September 14, set fire to the fuel oil supplies. The Gulf company's tug Ionia rushed up the canal to the assistance of the vessel at a wireless call for help, and started pumping water into the blazing engine room and quarters aft. Later the D. M. Picton tug Stella also was dispatched to the scene and joined the Delano in efforts to extinguish the fire.

Settling in the canal as the fire broke from the tugs threw streams of water into the engine room, the Isonzo capsize, part of the deck load of lumber sliding off into the canal as the ship went over. All told about 750,000 feet of lumber and timber were loaded on the Isonzo at the Lumber-Moore Lumber company's Orange terminal, and the ship set sail for Tampico on the evening before the fire broke out, tying up on the canal near the mouth of the Neches river for the night.

Isonzo Seized by Government

Major J. L. Schley, U. S. government engineer for the Galveston district, was in the Sabine district on the day the Isonzo capsize, and with Captain N. S. Storer, Beaumont agent for Lykes-Sigitovich Steamship company, U. S. representatives for the Italian owners of the Isonzo, and marine insurance agents, undertook the Isonzo and cargo. Major Schley held a series of conferences in Port Arthur throughout the week in an effort to determine the method of procedure for getting the ship canal cleared of the wrecked vessel.

The final conference, ending about noon on Saturday of last week, resulted in the government engineers seizing the Isonzo and all cargo remaining aboard and taking up the work of salvaging the vessel to clear the canal of the obstruction. By Sunday shipments of the extensive equipment for raising the Isonzo were arriving at the scene of the wreck and men were on the ground making preliminary preparations for clearing the vessel out of the canal and reopening the waterway to traffic.

Salvage Charged to Owners

Before the government engineers took charge, a contract was awarded to P. C. Pfeiffer, contracting stevedore of Port Arthur, for salvaging the deck cargo of lumber on the Isonzo.

Cost of salvaging the Isonzo and the cargo by the government, following the seizure of the vessel and cargo remaining aboard, will be charged up to the owners of the ship, and if they fail to pay, the vessel will be sold at auction, Major Schley said. Estimates of the loss to steamship owners and operators because of vessels tied up in Neches river ports, and others awaiting at Sabine and off Sabine bar for the clearing of the canal during the 12 days the Isonzo has blocked the channel to all shipping is estimated in Port Arthur marine circles as over $1,000,000. This estimate, it is pointed out, is based upon the upkeep of the ships lying idle, the delay in loading and delivering cargoes, and the loss to

100F DELEGATES END CONFERENCE

Orange Chosen as Next Convention City

With 311 delegates from Jefferson, Hardin and Orange counties representing 17 camps, the greatest meeting in the history of the Southeast Texas Odd Fellows association came to a close here late last night following a session which began early in the morning.

Orange was chosen as the next meeting place of the association to be held next February. Mrs. Edna Truel of Sour Lake was chosen president. W. I. Cockman of Port Arthur vice president. Mrs. Myrtle W. Wynne of Beaumont secretary-treasurer, re-elected, and H. A. Beck, Orange, chaplain.

Local Rebekahs Win

Port Arthur Rebekahs won the drill contest for the gavel which was participated in by seven teams.

The morning session was begun with invocation by Rev. C. W. Culp, pastor of First Baptist church, Port Arthur. This was followed with an address of welcome by Mayor J. P. Logan. Address of Oddfellows was delivered by George Tipton of Beaumont. Response was by W. Dilworth of Beaumont. Address for Rebekahs was by Miss Mabel Taylor of Port Arthur with response by Miss Kattie Davis of Beaumont. Address for the encampment was by E. J. Dearborn of Orange with William Whelpley of Port Arthur responding.

Luncheon was served at noon by the Port Arthur lodge to the visitors in the local lodge hall.

2 Afternoon Sessions

Two afternoon sessions were held, the first beginning at 1:30. Roll call of officers was the main matter of business along with the reading of minutes of the last session. An address on "East Texas L. O. O. F." was given by W. H. Garretson of Beaumont. A talk, the Rebekah branch, was given by Mrs. Harris of Port Arthur. W. H. Coughlin discussed encampment work.

The next afternoon session was at 3 and consisted of reports from committees, attending to unfinished business, introduction of new business and reports from representatives.

Contests of various lodge degrees and specialties marked a good portion of the night's program which began at 7:30 following dinner and music in the hall dining room. The address of the evening and main one of the entire session was by G. W. Hawkins of Houston, grand master of the order. Drills Complimented

The grand master complimented the Southeast Texas association for its drill work and the number of workers of statewide distinction it boasted. He said Texas had made itself felt recently at the international Oddfellows lodge convention held at Jacksonville, Florida.

A total of $600 was raised for the fine arts department of the state Oddfellows orphanage school at Corsicana, Rebekah lodge from Beaumont, Port Arthur and Sour Lake contributing $25, $25 and $10 respectively.

The session continued until late last night as much business had accumulated since the last association meet.

Jewish New Year Observances Tonight

The Jewish New Year which begins this evening at sunset and continues through Monday will be observed here by Port Arthur Jews, all Jewish stores announcing they will be closed all day Monday.

Though there is no synagogue in Port Arthur, all Jews, it is expected, will attend New Year services tonight and Monday at Beaumont or some other neighboring city. Religious services will be held tonight and Monday morning in all cities that have synagogues.

The day is observed as one of prayer and checking up of the past year, local members of the Jewish faith explain. Special prayers, including musical settings, will be observed at the Beaumont services it is understood.

SOCIALIST ELECTORS NAMED FOR LIBERALS

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept. 27.—Leaders of the socialist party met here today and named electors to go on the ballot pledged to the candidacy of Senator La Follette.

The meeting was an adjourned session of the state convention last week.

SWITCH ENGINE HITS TOURING CAR, 4 DEAD

CONNEAUT, Ohio, Sept. 27.—Four were killed and another seriously injured when a switch engine crashed into a touring car on a railroad crossing here tonight.

The dead: Mrs. Stella Kinney, 90. George McCumber, 11. Albert Castillan, 12, and Joe Castillan, 11.

PORTION OF MISSING STEAMER CLIFTON SEEN

CLEVELAND, Sept. 27.—Pieces of white wood believed to be part of the wheel house of the missing steamer Clifton were reported seen today near Point Abino, Pa. The lake was too rough to pick up the floating wood and for that reason positive identification could not be made. The Clifton, a 3500-ton whale-back manned by a crew of 18, was believed to have sunk in Lake Huron Sunday in a gale.

DAYLIGHT SAVING IN NEW YORK TABOODED

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—New Yorkers and residents of other eastern cities, who have been operating an hour ahead of the sun, will get 60 minutes added sleep tonight.

At the official hour of 2 o'clock tomorrow morning clocks will be set back an hour.

Abilene Is to Exhibit At Southern Exposition

Announcement the Abilene district comprising 14 west Texas counties would enter exhibits for the Southern Exposition to be held at New York next January and for which Texas is collecting a mammoth state exhibit, was received by A. L. Burge Saturday who is general secretary for the movement in Texas.

Burge states practically every district in Texas is coming in on the proposition. He has been asked to make a speaking tour in the west Texas districts and may probably accept sometime in November, Burge said Saturday.

ADVENTISTS SEEK TO RAISE QUOTA HERE

A campaign to raise Port Arthur's quota of funds for a nation wide drive for $750,000 for foreign missionary enterprises of the Seventh-day Adventist denomination is going on in this city, Mrs. O. B. Nichols, chairman of the local church campaign, announced Saturday. Each solicitor has been provided with a special card for identification purposes, Mrs. Nichols said.

YOUTH SEEKS FREEDOM FROM COURT DECREE

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 27.—Another 19-year-old boy, awaiting execution for murder, today looked to Judge Clevley's sentence in the Leopold-Loeb case as a precedent on which to escape the electric chair. Governor V. Donahoe of Ohio, interesting himself in the case of Alexander Kuzik for the first time, announced that he would confer with Kuzik's attorneys on September 30. Alexander is under sentence to the electric chair, October 27, for the slaying of his 13 year old cousin, Elizabeth Nagy, at Akron, last November.

It is generally conceded that women have greater civic pride than men. They evidence this by their interest in eliminating whatever, in their opinion, is detrimental to the ornamentation of the city. They like things beautiful—beautiful streets, beautiful parks, beautiful schools.

Statistics likewise show that the woman is the distributor of more than sixty per cent of the family income.

The one essential thing in city building, apart from public interest, is the MONEY to do it with. Money for this purpose is derived solely from taxation.

The city tax rolls would probably reveal that the local merchants and business interests pay more than one-half the entire taxes.

The Port Arthur merchant not only pays heavy taxes, which inures to public benefit, but he gives freely of his time and money to every worthy cause presented. As the town has grown our merchants have kept ever apace with its progress, until our stores would be a credit to a much larger city.

In our town there are two organizations, the Chamber of Commerce and the Young Men's Business League, the sole purpose of which is city building.

Yet we women, with our boasted civic pride, take our money, which is earned right here in Port Arthur, and send out of town for goods which we can purchase as cheaply from our local merchants. Every dollar spent elsewhere is gone, the merchant we patronize away from home has no interest in our town, no interest in us, except to get our money, and we are really robbing ourselves.

If we women had an organization whose slogan was TRY PORT ARTHUR FIRST, we could probably do as much real good as either of the worthy organizations above mentioned.

Mike Bruno Sustains Fractured Skull

Struck by an automobile Saturday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock near his parents' home at 1123 Houston avenue, his skull fractured and his right leg broken just below the hip, little Mike Bruno, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bruno, was not expected to live through the night, authorities at Mary Gates hospital reported at midnight.

The auto which struck the little boy was driven by a woman, who stopped and gave all assistance possible until arrival of an ambulance from the Grammer establishment rushed the lad to the hospital, police reported.

Young Bruno had not regained consciousness since the accident, it was reported at the hospital late Saturday night.

NEW SCHOOL BY NEXT SEPTEMBER

This Is Aim of Present Board of Trustees

Special to The News.
PORT NECHES, Sept. 27.—Sale of bonds for the new school building and letting of contract for its erection assures the next term of school will see the structure completed and ready for occupancy, according to J. C. Hawkins, president of the school board.

No particular hurry has been made by the school board to get the work under way since the $146,000 bonds were voted a few months ago. It was known at that time it would be another school year before the project could be completed. For this reason the board did not rush into the bond market and snap up offers in a hurry.

Bonds Sold at Par
When the bonds were first put on the market the price was low and the board refused to let them go. By holding on and investigating a few months the bonds were last week sold at par and accrued interest, minus the service charge of less than $5,000 which went to the brokerage company at Fort Worth which handled the sale. Three banking concerns from Cincinnati purchased the issue. The board is confident it got an excellent price for the bonds and is glad a thorough investigation was made.

Letting of contracts Thursday to the various specialty men who will erect the building, removed the last obstacle to getting actual building under way. C. F. Law of Beaumont with a bid of $104,975.00 was awarded the general contract. Work will begin at once, he stated Thursday.

Novelty Building Is Ready for Occupancy
Special to The News.
NEDERLAND, Texas, Sept. 27.—The Texas Novelty building adjacent to the Nederland Pharmacy, is practically ready for occupancy. The brick building underwent thorough remodeling.

Plans to install a restaurant in one of the vacant spaces have not yet materialized, but tenants are expected when the building is finished this week. A new drug store and soda fountain may be installed.

NEW BUILDING TO GO UP IN NEDERLAND
Special to The News.
NEDERLAND, Texas, Sept. 27.—A new building for Nederland to house a mercantile concern will be erected this fall. W. H. Newton this week acquired rights to a 25-foot lot adjacent to the Majestic theater and will build in the near future. A general mercantile store will be opened in the new frame building.

Special to The News.
PORT NECHES, Sept. 27.—A wedding of interest locally occurred September 16 when Miss Edley May Delcombre became the bride of W. E. Foster.

Mr. and Mrs. Foster are both of Port Neches, the former being an employee of the Port Neches Motor company.

Building Activity Booms Nederland

Special to The News.
NEDERLAND, Texas, Sept. 27.—Building activity at Nederland is going forward without any apparent let-up in the number of homes started, and this past week has been no exception—Messrs. Gilbert & Boyd and J. E. Callahan having started work on a number of new jobs.

The Hollywood addition has been completely sold out, and in discussing the achievement with Mr. Dumm, of the firm of Brown & Dumm, promoters of the property, he stated, had a waiting list of people who were desirous of securing lots in Hollywood, but at this time they were unable to supply the demand.

"At the present time, we have nearly twenty homes built or building in Hollywood. We have endeavored to protect the investment interests of the property owners by suitable restrictions, and as a result the homes now built in Hollywood constitute an attractive group of buildings as may be seen in any strictly suburban district in this section of the state."

INTEREST SEEN IN LYCEUM ENTERTAINERS

Special to The News.
PORT NECHES, Sept. 27.—Increased interest is being shown here in the Lyceum series which begins October 3, when the McCordis, singers, interpreters and dancers, present the first of a series of five entertainments contracted with the Dixie Lyceum bureau.

Superintendent J. H. Hicks of the public schools was appointed chairman of the Lyceum movement. Committee which sold the tickets was composed of Rev. W. H. Fortney, Rev. W. E. Hassler and E. C. Roberts. Sale of tickets indicates a good attendance is assured for the five performances.

C. OF C. OUT AFTER NEDERLAND MEN

Special to The News.
NEDERLAND, Texas, Sept. 27.—Every Nederland business man a member of the Chamber of Commerce is the goal of the membership drive now being conducted by the chamber here. Lack of finances has always held back chamber work, and an effort is being made to overcome this to some extent by drawing the business men into the organization unanimously.

The drive has been conducted for the last several weeks and probably will be carried on for two weeks more.

OVER 600 IN SCHOOL CLASS

Pt. Neches Student Body
Grows—Hicks

Special to The News.
PORT NECHES, Sept. 27.—Port Neches public schools have this year achieved a long wished for aim when Superintendent Hicks announced this year's enrollment had passed the 600 mark.

This exceeds last year's standing by more than 100 and assures one of the largest school systems in the county. Growth of the surrounding territory by additions of refinery subsidiaries has aided the enrollment greatly. Superintendent Hicks states. Fact that children are being brought to the local schools from surrounding territory by a bus line operated under the direction of the school board is given as another reason for the substantial growth.

With the school offering 23 units of work and having a large kindergarten and primary enrollment it is on the best basis in its history, officials say.

MAN REGAINS USE OF PARALYZED LEGS

Special to The News.
PORT NECHES, Sept. 27.—Friends of D. A. Bibb who a few weeks ago was stricken with paralysis and has up until recently been confined to his bed, are pleased to note his rapid recovery.

Bibb is gradually recovering use of his limbs and his physicians believe a complete recovery may possibly be effected.

LEAVES FOR KERRVILLE TO REGAIN STRENGTH

JACK SHIRES PASSES OUT BEST CIGARS

Special to The News.
NEDERLAND, Texas, Sept. 27.—Jack Shires, star first baseman with the Waco club of the Texas association last summer, is passing the cigars. An eight-pound girl was born to the Shires home Wednesday night, the second child in the family.

Petitions Circulated For Sanitary District

Special to The News.
NEDERLAND, Texas, Sept. 27.—Petitions for creation of a Nederland sanitary district now being circulated, will be submitted to the commissioners' court Monday, according to backers of the movement.

Sanitation laws will be enforced when the district is created. Practically all of the people approached are signing the petition, but efforts are being made to get a majority of the taxpayers here to sign before the petition is presented.

MISS SANDELL PLEASED AT PT. NECHES WORK

Special to The News.
PORT NECHES, Sept. 27.—Miss Mary Sandell, county superintendent of public instruction, made her first visit of the present school year to the Port Neches schools last week and expressed herself as agreeably surprised at the manner in which things are moving off this early in the season.

The county superintendent said she was proud of the state-wide recognition brought Jefferson county by the securing this summer of 11 new credits for the Port Neches school.

MAGPETCO COMPLETES UNIT OF 10 STILL

Special to The News.
PORT NECHES, Sept. 27.—Completion at Magpetco near here by the Magnolia Refining company of its 10-still unit last week will be followed by operation of the system which is a topping plant and to be used for separating lighter from the heavier petroleum products.

This job will probably be the last construction work of the Magnolia before the first of the year in this vicinity, officials indicated.

MAY CALL ELECTION ON RUSSIAN TREATY

Special to The News.
DERBY, England, Sept. 27.—Prime Minister Ramsey MacDonald told a Derby audience today that if the Russian treaties were defeated in Parliament when they come up for ratification next month, he will call for a general election.

"I don't think the country wants a break at this time," he said, "but if forced, we will appeal to the people."

SCHOOL TUTORS GIVEN PARTY

Pt. Neches Get Ride On "Texas Girl"

Special to The News.
PORT NECHES, Sept. 27.—Port Neches public school teachers were given their first official entertainment of the new school year when Friday night of last week they were the guests of the school board and Mrs. J. E. Trussell on a boat ride to Lake Sabine aboard the Texas Girl, boat owned by the Texas Company.

Bathing was one of the features of the trip. After exercising in this manner an appetizing lunch was served by Mesdames Tomberlain and Trussell. Those enjoying the outing were: Misses Mernice Fountain, Mary Louise Moore, Trixie Johnson, Miriam Windle, Wyche McMeans, Betty Algood, Georgia Morgan, Cynthia Gregory, Beulah Moore, Lottie Dee Hicks, Pearl Hellums, Lucy Scott, Hansford Quarles, and Nancy Lou Wynn; Mesdames Price, Ephlin, Hicks, Tomberlain and Trussell; Messrs. ## The Editorial Mind

In New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—A native New Yorker in his ambitious twenties has gone west to become caloused with life.

Born in the world's biggest, most "hard-boiled" city, he has left New York to get a little "hard-boiled" himself.

For the first time in his life he is breaking home ties. He has started to walk to the Pacific coast. He plans to be gone for five months and he will absorb life in lumber camps, on docks, in hotel camps, gravel pits and other places where men live by physical strength.

He will shut out lights of all cities and will live only among manual laborers, seeking a new understanding of people.

Few young men leave New York to learn life. For New York is so full of it.

There's a little eating shop under the shadow of the bright lights of Broadway that, innocent though it may appear, is as sinister a place as exists in all New York—or the country for that matter.

I am not permitted to reveal its exact location for obvious reasons. It is the rendezvous of most of the international crooks who might happen to be in the metropolis.

And there is not an hour of the day or night—for it remains open most of the 24 hours—when the sharp eye of some government secret service man or a foreign agent is not riveted on it.

Many a catch has been made via this little eating place. The arrest is never made here for, strange as it might seem, the crooks really do not know how closely the place is being watched. The victim is always trapped and the arrest always made in some "accidental" manner.

Tom Sims Says

They claim the Prince of Wales sets the styles for young Americans, and he stayed out all night.

They arrested a French count in New York for bootlegging; but it may be a mistake, most bootleggers looking like counts now.

Big fire near Pasadena, Calif., didn't get any presidential timber.

The price of gas is down a little, but this won't reduce the number of cars parked along country lanes.

The law says you can't make home-made wine, but many citizens know it will turn to vinegar, anyway.

Babe Ruth is leading in home runs again, or rather, yet.

A man has started around the world in a 20-foot boat, setting sail, of course, from our 12-mile limit.

Man who escaped from Sing Sing over a year ago was either caught or one winter outside was enough for him.

Ford is selling about 5000 cars a day, much to the disgust of shoe men.

Wallace Perkins Opens New Business Here

Wallace Perkins announced Saturday the opening of his sports store at his new location, 339 Austin Ave., from 225 Fifth street.

A complete line of all kinds of sporting goods for the athlete, hunter and fisherman is carried, along with a stock of bicycles.

PRAIRIE OIL MAKES CRUDE PRICE CUT

INDEPENDENCE, Kans., Sept. 27.—A reduction in price of crude oil purchased by the Prairie Oil and Gas company at wells in Kansas, Oklahoma and Northern Texas, was announced here today as follows:

Thirty degrees and below, 75 cents per barrel; 30 to 32.9, 90 cents; 32.9 to 35.9 (new grade) $1.10; 36 and above, $1.25.

BRISTOL'S WATER WHISKY FLAVORED

BRISTOL, Va., Sept. 27.—Corn whisky was served to Bristol water whisks through the municipal mains as a result of a raid by local officers two days ago at the filtration plant.

The raiders say four or five gallons of whisky were dumped into the public water supply when those at the plant learned a raid was impending.

NEGRO SLAIN DURING AUSTIN GUN DUEL

AUSTIN, Sept. 27.—Oscar White, 35, was under arrest here tonight, following a shooting affray on a downtown street during the afternoon in which John Sneed, negro, 40, was instantly killed. The cause of the incident was not known, according to police.

RITTENHOUSE RACES 222 1-2 MILES HOUR

PORT WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Flying in a Curtis navy seaplane racer and attaining at one time a speed of 242 1-2 miles an hour, Lieutenant Davis Rittenhouse, U. S. N., averaged 222 1-2 miles an hour, here today, breaking his own world's record by more than 50 miles an hour.

Rittenhouse's record is considerably below that for airplanes established by Lieutenant Al J. Williams who made 266.50 miles an hour in a navy Curtis racer last year. Seaplanes necessarily are much slower than airplanes because of their speed reducing pontoons.

U. S. ENGINEERS VINDICATED IN SOLUTION OF RAISING ISONZO

The Isonzo is raised and government engineers who have labored day and night for twelve nerve wracking days stand vindicated. The result has proved that the engineers' plan of attacking the problem confronting them through obstruction of the ship canal north of Port Arthur was the correct way. In the face of hostile opposition and clamors for dredging of a detour around the wreck by Beaumont interests this means something in the result.

Port Arthur shipping men and the public in general, especially that part which has known the difficulties attending the job, take off their hats to the engineers and their crews who went through every discouragement before the hulk was raised and the job a success.

There is another job ahead, that of pumping out the Isonzo to enable towing of the vessel to some point which will safeguard the canal to traffic. That, too, is being attended to.

In the Sabine District, which throughout its twenty-five years of service by the ship canal never has known a shipping disaster such as that resulting from the burning of the Isonzo, Saturday was a day of jubilation. The damage to the ship and owners was large, but it was a bagatelle compared with that suffered by Port Neches, Beaumont and Orange shipping interests. The loss has been estimated at something below or over a million dollars.

Raising of the Isonzo really was divided into three problems, that of raising the ship, that of mastering difficulties encountered as a result of the marsh land which circumstance decreed should be the seat of operations, and that of pumping out the vessel so that she might move. Two of these problems have been met. It is certain that the next will be, and that speedily.

Of the three, that encountered as a result of the nature of the soil, from a layman's standpoint, was the greatest obstacle. Had the vessel sunk a hundred yards further down the canal it would not have been met. But actuated by a perverse fate, the ship sank directly opposite and keeled over away from a large stretch of marsh, much of it under water and the balance sticky mud. It was here that the battery of winches had to be anchored in the ground in order to withstand the enormous pull. Scores of piles were driven in a long line, each about a foot apart in support of the "dead man" to which the winches were anchored. Twenty-five thousand feet of wire cable had to be strung on the job. Steam lines had to run from the government dredge Kimbel and tug boats to provide the necessary head to operate the winches. Equipment had to be assembled from a wide radius for the job. And back of the whole was highly organized effort which did not falter in the face of discouragements met in installation.

All of this took time, since no Aladdin's lamp was convenient to carry out magically the demands of critics. Pressure brought to bear in an effort to intimidate the engineers from carrying out their original plan apparently was the result of a strange lack of familiarity with the problem. Had a detour been dredged it would not have solved the problem. The Isonzo still would lie unmoved. Salvaging operations still would have to be completed. The ship would still have to be raised and towed away. And the detour would prove a formidable additional problem to one already large in itself, since additional time estimated at from days to weeks would have been necessary in which the canal still would have been bottled up, unless the wreck was allowed to lie and fall apart in the middle of the channel, eddies formed by its location in the current depositing tons of silt which would necessitate repeated removal.

HENRY FORD AS BUYER OF ANTIQUES

Henry Ford has bought still another old New England homestead, this time the Charles A. Burnham place in the town of Derry, New Hampshire. Henry is taking it to pieces and every piece of timber, even the nails, is being saved to be used in rebuilding it at Sudbury, Massachusetts, where the flivver man already has the famous Wayside Inn of Longfellow fame, together with several other old homesteads which the American billionaire has treated in a similar manner.

Tradition says the Burnham homestead was built in the year 1700, the old stairway is especially attractive, the nails used in building the house were all hand wrought and the man who built it was a fighter for freedom in the war for American independence.

Henry Ford is the man who threw away the presidency; Henry Ford is the man who threw away a senatorship; Henry Ford is the man who has just engaged an exclusive dancing teacher of Boston to teach the American billionaire how to cut the pigeon wing and other fancy steps.

If he is permitted to make the flivvers of the country he doesn't care a hang who makes the laws. He has made 10, 200,000 flivvers and the national lawmakers have made that many laws in less than twenty-four years.

CANADIAN WEALTH

A survey by the Canadian Pacific railway of the national wealth of the Dominion of Canada estimated the total at $22,195,000,000 or $2,525 per capita. Per capita allocation of wealth is a myth. There are six men in America whose combined wealth approximates six billion dollars.

Oil made the wealth of one and the flivver created the wealth of another.

Speaking of national wealth that of the United States is said to approximate three hundred million dollars. Canada has a population of less than ten million; Canada has natural resources that are almost illimitable and yet thousands of Canadians locate in the United States every year.

MAINE

Now that the official count of the votes cast in the recent election in Maine has been announced the figures are interesting. First for the reason that the vote was the largest ever polled in the history of Maine. Total vote for governor was 251,834. Total vote for senator 244,281. Almost eight thousand voters scratched the names of the two candidates for governor. William R. Pattangall who went down in defeat gets some consolation. He received a vote fifty per cent larger than any previously given to a democratic candidate for governor of Maine.

There are twenty-four million dairy cows on the farms of America. Annual income from them amounts to two billion dollars. Wealth from the sale of dairy products in 1923 was one-fourth the total income from all agricultural products sold in the United States. There is an investment of fifteen billion dollars in the dairy industry. Dairy cows are kept on 4,500 farms in the United States and an expert says dairy farming is practically the only line of farming that has advanced in production and consumption in the last four years.

WORLD FLIGHT IN 12 DAYS POSSIBLE—BY RELAYS

BY HARRY B. HUNT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—It's several months now since the "round-the-world" flyers hopped off at the beginning of their trip. "But don't forget this—when they reached Washington, their actual flying time was a little over 300 hours—about 12 1-2 days.

Could the journey be made in that time? So far as machinery is concerned, experts say "yes"—with relays of planes.

In fact, 12 1-2 days could be beaten, because the "round-the-world" aviators' planes have given progressively more trouble as the voyage neared their goal. They've been repaired unit by unit, but for all that they couldn't be made "as good as new."

With a fresh plane every few hops trouble would be reduced to a minimum.

But HUMAN machinery, the experts add, never could stand such a continuous flight. They would have to be relays of aviators, too.

The political headquarters here expect to see the question of "Ma" Ferguson's eligibility to the Texas governorship get into the federal courts and come up to the supreme bench, with the right-of-way over everything else.

The argument that "Pa" Ferguson really will be governor if "Ma" is elected is brushed aside—if "Pa" were the candidate, it would be just as logical to say "Ma" really would be governor in case he won.

But the proposition that the governor must be a man because the militia consists of "able bodied male citizens," and the governor, as its commander-in-chief, is a militiaman, is a different thing.

Not that constitutional authorities consider the case against "Ma" Ferguson very strong.

Their opinion is that her eligibility will be upheld. Still, they do recognize the militia issue as a "talking point."

What worries the state department division of the far eastern affairs about warfare in China is the fact that the Chinese don't like to fight. It may seem as if this would prevent them from doing it. It does, perhaps, up to a certain point, but when finally they do get to fighting, it makes it worse.

They dislike fighting, not because they're afraid. They simply see no sense in it.

So to get them to do it, it's necessary to make it worth their while. Good pay—good for a Chinese—is one way. But the commanders of none of the warring forces in China has much money, actual cash. So their only recourse is to let their soldiers loot—become bandits, in short.

This sort of thing, with big armies engaged in it, is serious. It spreads. The looters, having cleaned up one place, tend to go somewhere else.

With all China, or half of it, in such a turmoil, trade with the Chinese naturally would go smash. Besides, all kinds of complications probably would develop—demands for intervention—no end of anxiety and expense.

The commerce department, giving out 1923 vital statistics for the various states, lists the number of killed, here, there and everywhere in traffic accidents of numerous different sorts—automobile, street car, grade crossing, motorcycle, runaway—everything you can think of, almost.

Then comes the classification: "Injuries by vehicles of other types."

Now what other types can there be? Can you think of any?

The commerce department can.

It mentions them in footnote—aero-

RUSSIA MAY BE HITCH IN CENSUS OF AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The plan for a world census of agriculture is arousing the keenest interest among farm organizations throughout the country, among traders in farm products, among bankers who handle farm securities, among all who are concerned for agriculture's welfare.

The suggestion was made at the International Institute of Agriculture in Rome and Asher Hobson, American delegate to the institute, is here discussing it with agriculture department officials.

Obviously it is of first importance to any country's farmers to know when they plant and harvest, about farm conditions in other countries. They don't know now, for many countries gather no such statistics and others do it in so many different ways that comparisons mean nothing.

The institute's idea is to have them get together. Only one difficulty presents itself. How is an agricultural combination of this kind to be made effective without including Russia, one of the world's most important farming countries, potentially perhaps the very most important? And Russia isn't recognized by the United States. If Russia comes in, won't the United States refuse to do so—which would be just as fatal to a satisfactory exchange of information as it would be to have Russia excluded.

"But the United States," you say, "wouldn't be so foolish as to bar Russia in a matter of this sort, which has nothing to do with forms of government, international politics, debts or questions of diplomacy."

Don't be too sure of that. The Washington government refuses to accept weather reports from Russia because she doesn't recognize the latter. Siberian weather news is mighty important to forecasts in this country. But forecasters have to get along without it.

It isn't even necessary to get it direct from Russia. It's to be had from Japan, which isn't so particular. But America won't touch it. It's Russian and that ends it.

Officers of the Woman's National Party aren't so sure "Ma" Ferguson is eligible for the Texas governorship. Paradoxically they rather hope a supreme court test will prove she isn't.

It is pointed out at party headquarters that the Texas common law really does deny women the right to hold executive offices. The party leaders doubt if the federal nineteenth amendment sets this rule aside—it gives women the vote but doesn't say plainly that they may hold office.

Now the main object of the Women's National Party is complete citizenship equally between men and women.

DAWES PLEASD WITH OUTLOOK

Given Cordial Reception In Minnesota

ABOARD DAWES SPECIAL, EN ROUTE TO CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Deeply pleased with his reception in Minnesota, Charles G. Dawes headed for Wisconsin and Robert M. La Follette's home town today.

Since Senator La Follette is the only one of his opponents, General Dawes has assailed by name in the campaign so far, there is great interest in what the republican nominee will say about La Follette at Madison. On leaving St. Paul early today, Dawes said:

"We'll take care of that when we get there." His aides said he was going into Wisconsin with great confidence.

Walter H. Newton, Minneapolis congressman, said the ovations given General Dawes in Minnesota were "significant."

"Coolidge and Dawes will carry Minnesota without a doubt," he said. At St. Cloud last night, General Dawes made another strong appeal to the feminine voters. He credited them for giving him "good advice."

"The women want to know the facts," he said. "They want to know the issues and then they want to work for what they believe is right."

RUSSIAN GENERAL SERIOUSLY WOUNDED

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 27.—General Benadoni of the Russian army was shot and seriously wounded while entering an automobile in Batumi, by a Caucasian, according to a message from that city tonight.

Details of the shooting were not given.

Available records do not list any General Benadoni and it is thought that the dispatch refers to General Rudny, a widely known Cossack officer now serving with the Russian forces.

COURT STAND IS ARRAIGNED

Dawes Flays LaFollette In Address

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 27.—Charles G. Dawes, republican vice presidential nominee, in a speech here tonight, assailed Senator Robert M. La Follette, independent candidate for president.

Dawes attacked the LaFollette efforts to limit the powers of the supreme court, declaring the success of such a doctrine would wreck the constitution on the "shifting sands of socialism."

Labor Wage "ored" He denounced the policies of "high beef on the hoof and low beef on the table," and high wages for railroad men and low railroad rates.

"They talk to me about radicalism in the west," Dawes said. "I have lived in the west. I know the temper of the western people. This great, good west has no more radicalism than exists in New York City."

which expects to make a profit by taking out the metal work. The scheme is to burn the ships and let the metal simply fall out.

As ships, the conservationists admit, the vessels may not be worth much, but why they ask, burn all these millions of feet of valuable timber—with the country on the verge of a timber famine?

The shipping board is inundated with protests.

Lea Urges Legislative Act To Safeguard Federal Road Aid

Orange Man Named State Highway Head Stresses Necessity for Complying With Provisions

Submission of an amendment to the state constitution which would give the state authority to construct a connected system of highways is to be sought by the Texas highway association during the next session of the legislature, according to a statement issued Saturday by W. E. Lea of Orange, newly elected president of the association.

Adoption of such an amendment, Lea declared, is imperative if Texas is to continue to receive federal aid in the construction of highways. The act of congress providing for the granting of such aid provides specifically that it shall be extended, after a certain date, to only those states which provide adequate authority to a properly authorized agency of the state to construct, maintain and operate a state system of public highways.

Statewide Interest Officers of the association do not anticipate any difficulty in getting the legislature to submit the proposed amendment to the voters, Lea said. And once it has passed the legislative stage, the association has pledged itself to do all within its power to insure its adoption at the polls. The organization, Lea said, has 6,000 members in every part of the state who will co-operate in this work.

Among other legislative matters which the association has voted to call to the attention of the 39th legislature, which convenes in Austin next January, are the following:

"Further careful consideration of sources of revenue for the construction and maintenance and always in accordance with the public demand. The experience of Texas, as of every other state in the union, indicates the wastefulness of the policy of expending large sums in the construction of cheap types of public roads, that form the very nature of their construction, can be considered only temporary in character. We urge the building of more lasting improvements, except in those localities where local materials are available and can be used economically.

Headlight Law "A comprehensive statute for the regulation of common carriers. A statute regulating the use of headlights upon public highways."

At a recent convention of the association, resolutions were adopted urging strict enforcement of the laws regulating the operation of motor trucks upon the public highways.

The association also commended the state highway department for the "efficient policy developed" in the administration of highway laws passed by the last legislature. This resolution, according to President Lea, was prompted by the results obtained by the department since it took charge of highway maintenance on January 1, 1924.

Appreciation of the association also was expressed to "the press of the state" for its valuable co-operation in educating the public to a greater appreciation of good roads.

In addition to Lea, officers of the association are: Clifford B. Jones, Spurr; W. S. Whaley, Cleburne; O. P. Archer, McAllen; Henry Sackett, Coleman; C. S. E. Holland, Houston; Arch C. Allen, Dallas; Howard Bland, Taylor; Lee Morris, Chico; A. B. Mayhew, Uvalde; Ellis Boyd, Fort Worth; Tucker Royal, Palestine; Leonard Tillotson, Sealy; and C. H. Walker, Dalhart, vice presidents.

Possibilities of Commercial Airship Seen in World Flight

Nederland Missionary Society

Mrs. June Goodwin was hostess to twenty-five members of the Methodist Missionary society Wednesday afternoon at her home. Ways and means to interest the people in the revival now in progress here was discussed. The president, Mrs. F. A. Roach, had charge of a short business program, then the meeting was turned into a social hour, with dainty refreshments being served.

Parent-Teachers' Association The first meeting of the Nederland Parent Teachers' association met at the new school building Thursday, with twelve ladies present. Mrs. Jim Goodwin presided. New officers elected for the coming year were: President, Mrs. L. H. Ingram; first vice president, Mrs. L. D. Merritt; second vice president, Mrs. W. H. Gandy; third vice president, Mrs. J. M. Carter, secretary, Mrs. M. A. Carroll. The advisory board, composed of four men will be selected later. Those present were Messrs. J. Doornbos, L. D. Merritt, J. M. Carter, S. A. Carroll, W. H. Gandy, Greer, Ingram, Jim Goodwin, Misses Alberta Poage, Gattlin, Mary Kennedy, Alfred Davis; Messrs. Willis and Greer.

Building Notes Messrs. Gilbert and Boyd, local contractors, have started the erection of five new residences in Humphreys Heights and Haley Wood additions, varying from $3,000 to $4,500. The owners of the new homes will be M. H. Henderson, N. P. Cash, E. E. Sanford, J. R. Coker and Mr. Finley.

Dr. Hazlip is having his residence renovated and painted.

Persons Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Heffner and Mrs. Catharine of Port Arthur motored to Nederland Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sanderson are visiting relatives in Oklahoma.

The new officers of the Parent-Teachers association will meet with Mrs. Ingram Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. James McNeill spent Wednesday in Beaumont.

Rev. Roy Brooks, wife and baby son, will arrive the last of the week to make Nederland their home. Rev. Brooks recently accepted the pastorate of the Baptist church here.

Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Greer and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Jordan attended the K. P. banquet in Port Neches on Wednesday night.

Mrs. H. E. Hall is visiting her daughter, Mrs. W. A. Bresie, at Delquincy, La.

Mrs. M. D. Fitzgerald has returned to her home in Orange after a pleasant visit with her sister, Mrs. Webster.

Miss Ruby Johnson of Gandy, La., arrived Sunday to attend school here and is with Mrs. Hackworth.

Art and Needlecraft Club A charming affair on Friday was the meeting of the Art and Needlecraft club, which met with Mrs. D. Hackworth.

The home was lovely in the arrangements of cut flowers. The yellow and white color scheme was carried out in the rooms. Wicker baskets held huge bouquets of yellow daisies and golden rods. The refreshments also carried out the color scheme. Assisted by her little daughter, Eleanor, a dainty ice course was offered to Mesdames W. H. Gandy, R. B. Palmer, J. E. Cooke, Jr., George Beard, Verner, F. A. Roach, Sugart, Snelson and Parker.

McKINNEY TRAFFIC OFFICER APPOINTED

McKINNEY, Texas, Sept. 27.—Major Taylor has been appointed special patrolman by the city commission for the purpose of curbing traffic law violations here. No serious accident has occurred here recently but the appointment was made to avoid accidents if possible.

Foreign Air-Mail Service May Result From Trip American Birdmen Made Around Universe

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The around-the-world flight of the United States army airmen has done more perhaps than any other flying event which has ever taken place to center attention on the future possibilities of commercial aviation.

Foreign air-mail service is one of the developments which may result from this trip. With mail already being carried across the American continent and with its probable extension in the near future to other portions of the country, the next normal expansion would be to other countries. The natural step in this direction would be to some of the other nations of the American continent, because of the close geographical and commercial relations which already exist between the United States and those countries.

The United States post office department, therefore, is planning to send several of its experts to Central America and to Panama within the next few weeks to study the possibility of opening up an air-mail service from New Orleans or some other Gulf port to those other American republics. These post office officials may be accompanied by representatives of the army and navy, and perhaps also of the department of commerce.

C. I. A. STUDENTS HOLD ASSEMBLY

First Gathering Since Death of Bralley

DENTON, Texas, Sept. 27.—Students and faculty members of the College of Industrial Arts as well as many Denton townspeople met in the first assembly of the 1924-25 college year in the C. I. A. auditorium Thursday morning at 11:15 o'clock.

Dean E. V. White, acting president of the Texas State College for women since the death of the late Dr. F. M. Bralley, presided for the first time since assuming his new duties.

Ministers of the city occupied chairs on the stage were included in the program which was presented. Following announcements concerning present and future plans of the college a musical program was presented by new faculty members.

CHOC BEER FOUND AT SANGER HOUSE

DENTON, Sept. 27.—Officers made a raid at Sanger, this county, and seized and destroyed sixty-five gallons of "choc" beer. The beer was found on premises that had been vacant for some time, and as no one was found nearby no arrests have been made.

YMBL ASKED TO JUNIOR C-C MEET

The Young Men's Business League has been asked to participate in the State Junior Chamber of Commerce meeting called at Dallas October 18, which is expected to draw hundreds of junior commercial club members from all parts of the state, officials were advised Saturday.

President A. C. Reichle and Secretary C. K. DeBusk in all probability will be sent to the meet to represent the local organization, it was indicated by officials yesterday.</

DAVIS CONFERS WITH LEADERS

Meets Shaver, Others in Nation's Capital

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—More militant and confident of election victory, John W. Davis, democratic presidential candidate, came to Washington today to confer with party leaders over the progress of the campaign.

Davis met Clem L. Shaver, chairman of the democratic national committee and other party leaders.

At noon he greeted newspapermen at the National Press club and at 2:30 he will attend a reception given in his honor by the Davis and Bryan club of Washington.

Davis wound up his campaign in West Virginia last night at Bluefield in which he flatly announced himself as the exponent of all the principles of Woodrow Wilson.

Deplores Foreign Policy
Speaking of the democratic party and the sort of administration that it proposes to give, if elected, Davis deplored the foreign policy of the republican administration, as "cowardly."

"Speaking through the mighty voice of Woodrow Wilson, the democratic party gave men throughout the world in the hope that a new day had dawned; that the nations of mankind were to war no more; and that in the great council chamber of the world those causes of discord which had stained the surface of the earth with blood would be worked out in the calm atmosphere of reason and council," he said.

"In place of the man who says 'I dare not,' I wish to see my countrymen led by the man who says 'I dare!'"

GALVESTON COUNTY OPENS ANNUAL FAIR

GALVESTON, Sept. 27.—A parade, participated in by 2,000 school children, inaugurated the annual Galveston County Fair at Dickinson today. The exhibition will continue until Saturday night.

Divers exhibitions of farm products, domestic art, poultry, dogs, livestock and merchandise are on display.

WEST TEXAS GIVEN SPECIAL FAIR DAY

ATHENS, Sept. 27.—Thursday, Oct. 2 has been designated as West Texas Day at the East Texas Cotton Palace. A large number of people from West Texas have signified their intention to come. Free camping space has been arranged for those who come in their automobiles.

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce will have an exhibit here and will compete for the world's championship on corn, for which a prize of $500 is offered for the best ear.

The East Texas Cotton Palace will open here Monday night with coronation ceremonies and will close Saturday night, Oct. 4.

NOLTE WILL ASSIST BUTTE IN CAMPAIGN

DALLAS, Sept. 27.—Eugene Nolte of Seguin, chairman of the State republican executive committee, has returned to Texas after an extended trip through the north and east and will take an active part in the campaign of Dr. George C. Butte for governor.

WAXAHACHIE NAMES DUCHESS FOR FAIR

WAXAHACHIE, Sept. 27.—Miss Dorothy Chapman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Chapman of this city and a junior at Trinity University has been selected duchess from Waxahachie to the Ellis County Fair at Ennis.

REFORMERS SEEKING TO SUPPRESS PLAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Federal action against the Broadway success, "What Price Glory" as a violation of the National Defense act, was talked of by the United States district attorney's office tonight.

Gen. Robert L. Bullard, commander of the second corps area, United States army, and Admiral Charles F. Plunkett, commandant of the Brooklyn navy yards, were declared to have demanded that immediate steps be taken against producers of the play.

'SILENT VOTE' BEING TALKED

Demos May Take Stand Against 'Ma' Ferguson

DALLAS, Texas, Sept. 27.—Anti-Ferguson democrats were scheduled to meet here today to decide whether to register a "silent vote" against the woman candidate in the November election or go to the polls in support of Dr. George C. Butte, republican nominee for governor.

"There will be a strong faction in the state that will not vote the Ferguson ticket," S. A. Fishburn, of Dallas said, "and I feel sure that this strength will line up in support of Dr. Butte."

"Our meeting will decide whether duty to the state and nation shall be placed above loyalty to certain political regimes," Fishburn declared. Thomas B. Love, former national committeeman of Texas and Mrs. J. D. Claybank of Austin, woman leader of the state, were on the program for speeches.

ONE KILLED WHEN TRAIN IS HELD UP

WARSAW, Sept. 27.—One person was killed and several wounded when bandits held up a passenger train at Lunin today. After robbing the passengers the bandits blew up a bridge, disrupting traffic.

G.O.P. TARIFF UNDER FIRE

Wheeler Says Farmers Have Little to Say

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 27.—The republican tariff prevents the farmers from regaining their European markets, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, independent vice presidential candidate declared today, as he swept westward on his tour through the western farm belt. Wheeler promised repeal of the high tariff if the independents are successful.

"You have nothing to say about the price you pay for any product you sell or any article you buy," he told the farmer hearers. "If you controlled your own industry a tariff might help."

"The American Woolen company does one of two things when it produces more than we can consume here. It shuts down, or if the tariff is high enough, it raises its prices to the American consumer so it can afford to dump its surplus on the European market below cost if necessary."

"But you farmers can only buy

PAID FANCY PRICES

"I paid an international authority on diseases of the stomach, $1,500 and he didn't do me five cents' worth of good. I have been to various spas in Europe, as well as this country, and have spent fully $30,000 fruitlessly in search of a cure for my stomach trouble. Naturally I lost faith in any remedy for my case. My wife's brother had taken May's Wonderful Remedy and praised it so highly that I tried it and am now entirely rid of that trouble." It is a simple, harmless, preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. # Yellowjackets Grab Bacon, Rind and All, 103 to 0

Dayton Helpless As Locals Score 15 Touchdowns

BY L. L. ENGELKING
The News Sport Editor

ONE HUNDRED and three to nothing. That tells the story of the Port Arthur-Dayton game in the simplest manner. That's the score by which Port Arthur's Yellowjackets won, and the score itself tells what sort of a game approximately 1,500 people saw on Franklin field yesterday afternoon. Dayton only once threatened the Yellowjackets, when the visitors' passing attack started going right late in the game against a crew of second stringers, but Coach Smith staved off a possible touchdown by rushing in his entire first string team.

Individual stars were hard to pick out for Port Arthur, for the competition was not strenuous enough to show up a great many weak points. When a winning team piles up a 103-0 score and makes 33 first downs to three for the opposition, there isn't a great deal of use in rhapsodizing about this or that player. Suffice it to say that they all played good football. The substitutes put in some good work, for most of the Yellowjacket squad of 35 were given a chance to play.

The only severe injury of the game was sustained by Bercheu of Dayton, who sprained an ankle early in

Yelling of Yellowjacket Girls Lends Pep To Lopsidedness of First Game

The Yellowjackets were inspired to victory partly at least by the determined cheering of the girls' section of rooters. The yelling of the band, which was kept up constantly. Preceding the game there was a parade downtown, headed by the Yellowjacket Supporters club of girls and the high school band. Between halves the last rites were performed over the "corpse" of Dayton, as promised in Friday night's shirt-tail parade. With "Dayton" in bandages and on crutches at the head, a procession marched around the field between halves of the game. Following the spectacle of crippled "Dayton" came the coffin, solemnly black, containing Dayton's "remains," followed by the Yellowjacket girls.

The Yellowjacket fumbling was rather noticeable yesterday, although it was not costly. Fortunately, the backfield followed the ball closely enough to recover most of the fumbles. However, fumbles like those committed yesterday may prove disastrous in a more important game. On at least one or two occasions fumbling was due to a bad pass from center.

The Yellowjacket kickoffs were not as good as they might have been. Dent Taylor did most of the kicking from midfield, but neither the distance nor the height was right. Twice the kickoff was caught

Port Arthur Line and Wingmen Do Right Well Against Dayton

The players in the line generally get little enough credit, but they deserve due credit for their work yesterday. Very rarely did Dayton make any gains—and they made few enough gains altogether—through the Yellowjacket line. There were simply too many pounds in that line to contend with.

Particularly noticeable was the good work done by the two first string ends, Crow and Trow, a nice pair of rhymer. Crow was up to form on receiving passes and Trow made some nice tackles.

The Yellowjackets had rather good luck with their forward passes, completing seven out of 13 passes, none of them being intercepted. One hundred and eight yards was made on seven successful passes, an average of more than 15 yards. This includes only the distance actually made on the pass, discounting the yardage on runs after the pass had been caught.

Dayton didn't fare so well with its passes, attempting 24, practically all of them in the last half. Six passes were intercepted, of which two were carried to touchdowns, and 12 passes were incomplete. Six passes were completed for 64 yards, an average of 11 yards.

The crowds were pulling for Iglesias out at Franklin field yesterday. Yell after yell was for "Mohicky—Mohicky." The diminutive quarterback was in good form at directing his team, driving them right along, taking the whole thing as seriously as though it were life and death instead of rather a burlesque. Little Iglesias was all business out there yesterday. In fact, all the boys took the thing to heart, but "Mohicky," the generalissimo of the attack, ran that game as forcefully and earnestly

Morgan, Elliott, Batterbee, All Flash Alongside of Star Quarter Iglesias

"Buzz" Crow played a crack game at an end, the passes almost invariably settling down into his outstretched arms. Batterbee, sent in as a backfield substitute, played a fighting game and made consistent gains. "Shrimp" drew almost as much applause as Iglesias for his playing.

One of the star runs of the day was made by Elliott in the third period. Elliott was playing quarterback, and the center made a bad pass. Elliott scooped the oval out of the dirt, Dayton players were plunging in from both sides, and "Nubbs" was expected to be thrown for a loss. But two would-be tacklers were stiff-armed back of the line of scrimmage and Elliott was off clear across the field. Almost carrying the ball out of bounds before he was tackled out down the field, Elliott dodged on 35 yards to a touchdown.

Long "Country" Blanchard annexed a touchdown for the family name in the third period when he intercepted one of Dayton's passes and ran 15 yards to a touchdown. Dayton was passing deep in its own territory, something rather dangerous for any team, but it made little difference to the visitors. The Dayton boys were out to score at least a touchdown, regardless of how many Port Arthur made in the meantime, but the Dayton efforts were in vain. It was a clean game all the way. Dayton realizing the strength of Port Arthur from the start. But there was not a word of disparagement heard from the Dayton supporters, although they gallantly cheered whenever their boys advanced a yard.

Dayton was a Conference "B" team

BAYLOR BEATS SIMMONS, 7-6

S. M. U. Wins From Denton Teachers, 7-3

Texas football ran to form yesterday so far as the winners were concerned, but there were two woeful upsets as to size of scores.

The University of Texas Longhorns did what they were expected, defeat Southwestern 27-0, but Baylor and S. M. U. had some hard sledding. Baylor barely managed to win from Simmons out at Abilene, 7 to 6, while S. M. U. came through with a 7-3 win over the Denton Teachers, Texas A. & M. Friday defeated Trinity, 33-0. As a result, there will be some fresh predictions this week.

Baylor Really Has Alibi
Texas won by about its customary score from Southwestern, although the Pirates always give the Longhorns some hard competition. Last year the Texas-Southwestern game was saved until Armistice day, Texas winning 33-0.

Baylor has something of an alibi, for the Bears' comparatively poor showing out in west Texas, for Jack Jones, who had been counted on heavily to fill out Bridges' backfield, has been declared temporarily ineligible. Conter, star end, was ineligible for the Simmons game on account of not entering Baylor until well into October last fall. Connally was reported as unable to take part in the game on account of injuries.

Simmons, with Shotwell as coach from Abilene high and a star complement of last year's Abilene high players, probably will put quite a caper in Texas football before the end of the year.

Briefly, Texas A. & M. are showing up as dark horses, not disappointing anyone very greatly if they don't win championships, and yet teams with potentialities under their resourceful coaches.

FAIR MAY NOT SEE FOOTBALL

Sour Lake Game Still Is In Doubt

Port Arthur's fair may find itself without any outstanding athletic attraction, for the tentative game for Sour Lake to play the Port Arthur Yellowjackets here October 18 seemingly has fallen through. Port Arthur will play at Sour Lake, Coach Lee Smith said yesterday.

Arrangements were held up on the Sour Lake game for some time, long that some agreement might be reached, but finally the game was switched to Sour Lake. Port Arthur already has home games with Orange, South Park High and Beaumont High with Galveston and Central High of Houston to be met on foreign fields. This carries the schedule to November 11, when it will be known whether or not Port Arthur has any shot at the district title or possibly any big-time hopes.

Hopes have not been given up that Sour Lake will be brought here as a fair attraction, and high school officials think the guarantee may be put up by some outside agency.

BOY TRAFFIC COPS
Berkeley, Calif., has installed auto stop signals near its schools and has established a corps of boy traffic police to direct traffic while the children go to and from their schools.

In the University of Texas intercollegiate league, the only such team to be played by Port Arthur this season, all other games being with Conference "A" teams. Next Saturday's game is on Franklin field against Orange, while South Park high of Beaumont comes here on the following Saturday.

Yes, Indeed—'Highpocket' and 'Shorty' Both Expect to Be Stars for Dear Old Princeton

Hills, line candidate for Princeton's football team, is six feet eight inches tall and is said to be the tallest man playing football on a leading college eleven. Goldstein, his teammate, is five feet one inch from the ground. Hill comes from Washington, D. C., and Goldstein hails from Pittsburgh.

VISITORS PLAY RAGGED GAME

Last Quarter Threat to Score Fails

Special to The News.

BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—The Lake Charles Wildcats were no more ferocious today than last year, going down in a 13-0 drubbing before Beaumont high. With the same lineup that held the U. S. champions from Toledo to a 14-0 score in 1923, the visitors found just as tough going this afternoon and at no time threatened to scratch out a victory. Beaumont, on the other hand, performed as a well lubricated machine, and after a quarter of field fight hustled off her plays to good advantage. This feature, incidentally, stood out as a strong omen over the Purple's play of last year when "stars" and their individual endeavors unquestionably hampered the team.

Threaten On Home Stretch
Lake Charles played raggedly for three quarters, then braced and made a gesture to score. Constant hammering by her shiny backs punched a leak in the Purple forwards which was plugged only after the visitors had marched to the 20-yard line. This was her closest approach to scoring although a bad attack on butterfingers suffered by Beaumont in the first quarter made a touchdown possible on several occasions.

Beaumont's first score came five minutes after play and was something in the nature of a fluke. Ballow, playing his first game for the locals, kicked off 48 yards to Reeves who returned seven. Reeves immediately punted a roller to Saxe, who was downed in his tracks. Three small gains were made through the line, then Beaumont punted 32 yards out of bounds. With the ball on her 15-yard line, Lake Charles negotiated a five-yard gain, then fumbled and Baker recovered for Beaumont. The latter's line last year a puzzle to Beaumont, was today fairly easy and repeated pounding by Saxe, Ellis, Ballow and Hightower wore it to solution.

Purple Finally Tightens
Then in the final quarter Beaumont took the ball 35 yards from home and by steady advances in which two perfectly executed passes helped greatly, marched uninterrupted to the second touchdown. Hightower this time kicked goal.

First downs made by each team offer good comparison of the strength revealed today. Beaumont had 13 to her credit and Lake Charles three. The latter's line last year a puzzle to Beaumont, was today fairly easy and repeated pounding by Saxe, Ellis, Ballow and Hightower wore it to solution.

Score by quarters—
Lake Charles ..... 0 0 0 0—0
Substitutions—Beaumont: Misa for Ellis, Elam for Saxe, Anger for D. Plummer, Goler for Brock, F. Plummer for Ballow, Lake Charles: Vincent for Storer, Kimball for Ford, McCosgrove for Hale, Faurel for Landry. First downs, Beaumont 13, Lake Charles 3. Forward passes, Beaumont completed 3 for 21 yards, 3 incomplete; Lake Charles completed 1 for 17 yards, 2 incomplete. Penalties, Beaumont, 25 yards; Lake Charles, 15. Touchdowns, Saxe and Elam. Field goal, Hightower. Referee, Vener (Missouri). Umpire, Hanna (Texas Aggies). Head linesman, Quinn (Southwestern.)

CLASSIC PLAYS OF THE GRIDIRON

How "Potsy" Clark Ran His Famous "Perfect Interference" Touchdown

BY R. A. COWELL
Football Coach, University of Mississippi

Perch yourself up where I was, on the score board, with a wonderful lengthwise view of the football field at Urbana, Ill., below. Illinois and Chicago were engaged in a Western Conference battle before 18,000 frenzied fans, a capacity crowd for that field. For it was the season of 1914 and Illinois was still 10 years removed from the great stadium that now dwarfs the old field by comparison.

The whistle blew for the second half. Chicago kicked off. And without preliminaries the greatest play I have ever seen on any football field was being reeled off. "Potsy" Clark, Illinois' great back, received the kick directly in front of the goal posts and inside the five-yard line.

He was away like a sprinter. Straight down the field he headed. Ten yards, 20 yards. Well, he didn't stop until he had crossed Chicago's goal line.

It was a great bit of running on Clark's part, but the memory that stays most vividly with me is of those other 10 Illinois mowing down their Maroon opponents like so many tennins. Like tennins because it seemed to me that the whole flock of potential tacklers converging on the runnig were cut down simultaneously.

That was as pretty a piece of team-play as a lover of the game could wish to see. Eleven men acting as one. Perfect timing. Perfect co-ordination. Perfect execution. Anyone witnessing that play must have been impressed as I was with the superior power of 11 driving together over 11 individuals going their separate ways.

And don't forget that, as happened in this instance, the team that scores first, often scores again. Success instills confidence and confidence is in itself the source of new strength.

South Park High Defeated At Silsbee in Opener, 12-9

Port Arthur held the limelight in Jefferson county football yesterday—in fact, absolutely hogged it. That is, hogged it if scores mean anything at all.

While the Yellowjackets were pouring it on Dayton 103 to 0 in an entirely sportsmanlike manner, the teams up a Beaumont couldn't do as well. Of course, they probably had a little stronger competition.

South Park High, under coach Bill Fehl, tasted defeat at Silsbee, 12 to 9. Bull Johnson's South Park College had a little more success and trimmed Orange, 28 to 0. Beaumont High's purple walloped Lake Charles, 13 to 0.

Port Arthur plays Orange here this week-end, and South Park high the following Saturday. Lots of dope will be available for comparison shortly.

Of course, Lee Smith's Yellowjackets might have chased across a few more touchdowns yesterday afternoon, but what's a touchdown or so more or less between friends?

BLUEGE'S HITS TIMELY

In Bluege the Washington team has one of the classiest fielding third basemen in captivity. Although Ossie's batting average is nothing to write home about, the youngster has decidedly improved his stickwork during the closing weeks of the campaign. What's more, his hits come when they are most needed.

'REBEL' DEMOCRATS TO SUPPORT BUTTE

PANTHERS GET 5 HOME RUNS

Wachtel Steady as Texas Nine Comes Back

FORT WORTH, Texas, Sept. 27.—The Fort Worth Panthers, Texas League entry in the Dixie championship series with Memphis, pulled a 11 to 3 victory out of a slam-bang contest here today, featured by five home runs.

Paul Wachtel, Panther hurler, pitched steadily, while Slim McGrew, Memphis, was knocked out of the box in the second inning when Calvo poked a home run and scored Wachtel ahead of him. Edgington and Sears lined out homers in the third and fourth innings and Sears repeated in the sixth. Eddie Palmer, second sacker for the locals, knocked out the last Panther homer in the sixth. Memphis scored three runs in the sixth.

Both teams will play here tomorrow and Monday and return to Memphis if a further game is necessary.

EPINARD LOSES BEFORE 70,000

Ladkin Wins $25,000 Purse at Aqueduct

AQUEDUCT RACE TRACK, NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Ladkin, NEVADA colt, won the $25,000 international race from a field of five other starters before a crowd of 70,000 here this afternoon. Epinard, the French colt, was second and Wise Counselor, F. A. Burton's western entry, was third. The time for the mile was 1:36 2-5.

Two hours before the time for the classic the stands were crowded to capacity and thousands milled around the grounds, keeping busy a flock of special policemen and state troopers. The weather was fine and the track was lightning fast.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Rialto was the only entry scratched. The field included Epinard, Zev, Wise Counselor, Ladkin, I. B. Humphrey's Little Chief and Admiral Grayson's My Own.

Epinard ruled a two to one favorite in the early betting with Ladkin and Wise Counselor dividing second choice.

But to Epinard, the champion Epinard, went all the glory and applause.

Today Epinard was bumped around on the far turn and was shut off for the loss of four lengths. He got back on his stride and closed gamely on the outside of the track.

Turning into the stretch when he had been cleared of all interference, Epinard bore down on Ladkin and was close at the finish that it was certain he would have won in another hundred yards.

Some rare birds said tonight that Everett Haynes, American jockey, who came back home from France to ride Epinard in the international race had been guilty of dumb riding in the event. Others said that Ladkin should have been disqualified for the foul work of Clarence Kummer who had the leg upon the winner.

Haynes got Epinard away to a perfect start and a lead of a length on the field in the first sprint with Ladkin second and Zev third. At the quarter Steve O'Donnell had Wise Counselor in the lead with Ladkin second and Zev third. Dashing past the half mile Wise Counselor led with Ladkin second and Epinard third. When the field passed the three-quarters Ladkin was first and Wise Counselor was in front with Ladkin second and Epinard third.

Kummer then shook up Ladkin heading for the wire and the big chestnut responded with a leap that carried him into first place, with Epinard second and Wise Counselor third. They finished in that position.

Woman Admits She Poisoned Her Husband

MARION, Sept. 27.—Ruby Harrington Tate, today in a second confession to Williamson county authorities admitted she gave arsenic twice to her husband Joseph Harrington, in order to allow her to marry Robert Tate.

"I put arsenic in the dinner pail he took to the mines," the woman said. "He got sick, but didn't die."

"Four days later, on September 2, I put one and one half teaspoons full in a glass of buttermilk which he drank."

Harrington died early the following morning.

Giants Cinch Pennant—Washington Can Do No Worse Than Tie

M'GRAW GRABS 4TH STRAIGHT

Johnson and McQuillan to Open Series

By HENRY L. FARRELL (United Press Staff Correspondent) NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Tickets for one-half of the world's series bearing the name of the New York Giants were turned out tonight by overtime printers in New York.

The Giants cinched the National league pennant this afternoon and gave their manager, John J. McGraw, the honor of the first major league pilot to win four championships in a row.

Senators Rally Wins

Tickets were also being high-powered through presses in Washington for the first two games of the series. The Senators did not do as well as the Giants in cinching the pennant today, but they reached the place where the worst they can get is a tie.

The Giants attained the mathematical certainty by winning from the Phillies while the Boston Braves were beating the Brooklyn Robins and kicking them definitely and finally out of the pennant race.

The Senators came from behind and beat the Boston Red Sox, while the Yankees were being tumbled by the revived Philadelphia Athletics.

Washington gained a game in the pennant race and increased their lead to two full games. If Washington loses two games and the Yankees win two the rivals will finish in a tie and they will have to fight it out for the pennant in a series of three games that probably would interest the world series.

Will Open in Washington

If Washington wins one more game or if the Yankees lose another game the season will end with the Senators the pennant winners.

The Brooklyn Robins, passed out of the pennant race because they have only one more game to play and two half games ahead of them.

New York considers that Washington and the Giants are sure to meet in the series.

Walter Johnson is considered to be the sure opening pitcher for Washington and Hugh McQuillan probably will be started for the Giants.

The series will open next Saturday in Washington and the second game will be played there on the following Sunday. The two teams would then come back to New York for three games.

Goslin Leads His League In Left Field, Says Billy

This is the seventh of a series by Billy Evans, nationally famous umpire, comparing individual values of players who may compete in the world series. In this article Evans discusses the left fielders.—EDITOR'S NOTE.

B. MEUSEL, NEW YORK—Bats and throws right handed. A player with great natural ability, who will probably never achieve the fame possible because of lack of initiative. Has the greatest throwing arm in baseball. Big man but very fast. Hits the ball hard when he connects. Dangerous batsman.

GOSLIN, WASHINGTON—Bats left and throws right handed. Has a rather awkward style in the field but covers much ground. At bat he takes a terrific cut at the ball and is one of the most dangerous batters in the majors. Has come fast during the last two years. Much improved player.

CUNLEIGH, PITTSBURGH—Bats and throws right handed. The sensation of the year in major league circles, the outstanding recruit player of the National League. His fine play in all departments, particularly at the bat, one of the big reasons for the showing of the Pirates. A star in his first year in the majors.

E. MEUSEL, NEW YORK—Bats and throws right handed. Veteran star who has played his usual good game for the Giants. Is a money player, who always arises to the occasion when big stakes are being played for. A .300 hitter, noted for his extra base wallpops, and timely hits.

WHEAT, BROOKLYN—Bats left, throws right handed. For years one of the best outfielders in the game. Is having a big year at the bat, being well over the .350 mark all season. His fine play has been a big factor in the late rush of the Brooklyn club in the pennant race.

KATYNG, THERE is plenty of class in the left field, featuring veteran stars and rookie phenoms. The remarkable showing of Cuyler in his first year, really entitles him to the edge, although it is possible that in a world series, the experience of some of the veteran stars might make them more valuable. Goslin rises best of the American Leaguers. In the National League Wheat has the call over E. Meusel.

VON ELM HOLDS LITTLE CHANCE

Georgian Has Advantage Throughout Day

MERTON CRICKET CLUB, PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—Eight years ago on the grassy slopes and twists of the Merion course, a fat little boy of 14 from the south sneaked in with the giants of the golf world and pulled the David sensation of the time.

Today, on the same course the same fat little boy, grown into chubby Bobby Jones, most famous citizen of Atlanta, became the big giant of amateur golf when he won the national championship from one of the finest fields that ever went out for the title.

The smiling, affable Bobby beat George Von Elm, the Los Angeles youth, 9 and 8, in the final round for the title.

Jones had the advantage all day and he maintained it with steady golf. The card:

Out: Jones 533 645 443—38
Von Elm 464 545 553—41
In: Jones 444 444 435—35—73
Von Elm 444 345 535—37—78

GRANGE FEARED OVER BIG TEN

Illinois Star Scores Twelve Touchdowns

URBANA, Ill., Sept. 27.—Can Harold Grange repeat his sensational record of last year on the football gridiron of the coming season? This is the question thousands of football fans are asking.

This is the record they are wondering about. It shows the time played and yards gained in each game:

30 Min. Nebraska 208 Yards
60 Min. Iowa 175 Yards
28 Min. Butler 142 Yards
19 Min. Northwestern 251 Yards
30 Min. Wisconsin 140 Yards
59 Min. Chicago 160 Yards
60 Min. Ohio State 184 Yards

In 235 minutes against his opponents he gained 1200 yards and scored 12 touchdowns, more than any other back in the Big Ten Conference.

Last year virtually the entire offering of the team was Grange. This was shown by the playing of the Illinois in the Wisconsin game after the All-American star had been withdrawn to save him for the following week. The team was content to remain on the defense, in fact, not a single first down was made while Grange was out of the lineup.

The team that came nearest to stopping the great "Red" was Ohio State. For three quarters the two teams had tugged back and forth, neither having a decided advantage or scoring any points. Then the big chance came.

Quarterback Harry Hall intercepted an Ohio pass on the Illinois 19-yard line. It took just eight plays to put the ball over the goal line, and Red carried the ball six of the eight times and gained 78 of the 81 yards. The other three yards were made by Schultz, halfback, on two line plunges.

YANKS DROP TOUGH SERIES

The three games the Yankees dropped to Ty Cobb's Tigers must have nearly broken Miller Huggins' heart. The Yanks went into the series in a first-place tie with Washington and emerged two games to the bad. Every game was lost to Detroit by a one-run margin.

Manager Six Years

Rickey then decided to pilot his own club and he put on the managerial spangles in 1918.

Jackie Coogan Cherishes Navajo Initiation Honors

BY JACK JUNGMEYER
News Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 27.—When Jackie Coogan, to whom so many fabulous things have happened, reviews the honors and ceremonials bestowed upon his Dutch-bobbed head, probably the most cherished in years to come will be the one that initiated him into the Navajo tribe of Indians.

For weeks now, young Coogan has been an accredited "medicine man" in the lodge of New Mexico's aborigines.

For weeks he has been trying to twist his tongue glibly around his tribal name, Be Nave Yulthie, which, in pure Navajo, I am informed, means "Talking Eyes." Indians can find the appropriate name; Jackie has talked his way around the world with his eyes.

The ceremony took place at Albuquerque when the little picture star stopped there on his transcontinental trip gathering contributions for the Near East Relief fund.

No white boy hitherto had been admitted to full membership in the patrician Navajo clan, numbering 35,000. It was a matter of serious consideration by the old chief. What interested him most was that Jackie was bound for a distant land to hear good will and gifts to starving children, in behalf of legions of American youngsters.

Old Hash Kay Yashi, now past 90, was once a thorn in the side of Uncle Sam. He raised hob in New Mexico. He led the rebellion of 1863—the last full-fledged Indian outbreak in the region. He was a fighter. Now he is a philosopher, to whom a mission to miserable children engaged sympathy.

"Heap Good Boy"

Before making his decision on Coogan's eligibility, Hash Kay Yashi asked to see one of his pictures, then being shown at Gallup. Thither the chief was transported by Mike Kirk, Indian trader, whom natives thereabout call "boss." At the conclusion of the film the chief delivered himself to this sententious verdict:

"Humph—good! Heap good boy. Make 'um little medicine man. Call 'um Be Nave Yulthie. Means 'Talking Eyes.'"

Mystic Rites Held

There were appropriate and mystic rites during which the pale boy with the articulate oryx sat gravely in a circle of Navajo children and their withered elders—recipients of their gifts to needy youngsters of whom they had never before heard, as well as of their high honor.

And not least of the day's dramatic happenings, I am old, was the meeting of the chieftain and Dan Dubois, who, in '03, was on the trail of Hash Yashi even as the latter was on the heels of the intrepid scout. Now they clasped hands in amity—while Jackie struggled excitedly into his scarlet tunic and silver-buttoned leggings.

Whatever the ceremonial may have meant to Jackie, I vouch his honest publicists, "to the Indians this was no game, nor any press-agent's ruse fulfilled."

Oil stock, bought by her fiancé, nearly wrecks the budding romance of the girl and her lover even while the little bungalow he is building for her is nearing completion, and makes the plot for the Christie comedy, "Hold Your Breath," scheduled to play at the Cameo theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

The crisis comes when Dorothy is discharged from the beauty parlor, and Dick, her fiancé, gleefully informs her he has invested all their savings in oil stock. A wild hunt for the oil stock salesman brings grief to Dorothy when a monkey steals a valuable bracelet she is examining in the salesman's office, and she is accused of the theft.

A rollicking lot of situations, experiences and happenings give pep and spice to "Hold Your Breath," according to the advance notices.

Twenty ministers and twelve elders were in attendance.

Hoxie Stars at Liberty in 'Ridgeway of Montana'

THE CAST

Buck Ridgeway	Jack Hoxie
Alone Hanley	Oliver Hasbrouck
Simon Hanley	Herbert Fortier
Steve Pelton	Lou Meehan
Rev. McNabb	Charles E. Thurston
Pete Shagmire	Pat Harmon
Lyndon Hobart	Pierre Gendron

A girl's determination to make a man regret leaving her without even saying good bye, when they were just getting to be good friends forms the theme for the production "Ridgeway of Montana," which will play at the Liberty theater Tuesday and Wednesday.

The girl sets out to find the man, but his cabin is above the snow line, and she is used to all the comforts of home. Driving to the cabin, the girl finds the man, but a blizzard blows in and they are unable to get out. An unexpected climax and plenty of action feature the production.

Jack Hoxie is the star of "Ridgeway of Montana," with Olive Hasbrouck playing the part of the 19-year-old flapper.

'Unguarded Women' at Peoples. A Story of Sinister Orient

THE CAST

George Albright	Richard Dix
Heleen Castle	Mary Astor
Larry Trent	Walter McGinnis
George Castle	Frank Losee
Aunt Louise	Helen Lindroth
Sing Woo	Harry Mestayer
James Craig	Donald Hall
Capt. Robert Banning	Joe King

A strange, tense and dramatic struggle of a man to save the woman he alone can save from ruin in the picturesque, but sinister Orient, is the story of "Unguarded Women," the production which plays at the Peoples theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Ending the widow of the man who lost his life on the battlefield to save him in a moment of cowardice, Douglas Albright seeks to pay the debt he owes to his friend, Captain Robert Banning. Complications arise as Helen Castle, Albright's fiancé, touring the Orient with him, is not told of his efforts to save Captain Banning's widow.

Albright offers his own life and happiness to save the woman.

TWO FEATURES ON PEARCE BILL

Star Shirley Mason and Larry Semon

Two feature productions on one bill are announced for the Pearce theater this week by the management of the Holton theaters, operators of the Pearce.

One of these productions is a Larry Semon feature comedy, "The Girl in the Limousine," which had a long run on Broadway; and the other is a William Fox production, "That French Lady," starring Shirley Mason.

Both of the features are scheduled to start Sunday and continue through Friday, according to an announcement from the management.

UNIVERSITY MAN IS SECRETARY TO BUTTE

AUSTIN, Sept. 27.—James T. Beverly, of Corpus Christi, has been appointed personal secretary to Dr. George C. Butte, republican candidate for governor, and will begin his duties at the Butte headquarters in Dallas, October 1. Beverly is a law graduate of the University of Texas and served overseas in the world war.

Shifting scenes, lives of men and women polished and raw, and a story of struggles against environments, situations and companions are among the elements mingling in the production, "The Foolish Virgin," with Elaine Hammerstein, which will play at the Cameo theater Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Jim Owens, raised in the underworld of an eastern city, fights against the chances life has apparently given him, and with him in the struggle is Mary Adams, good despite the surroundings that have been here. Through a number of difficulties, the two work out their destinies.

'Drums of Jeopardy' at Strand Features Elaine Hammerstein

THE CAST

Kitty Buell	Elaine Hammerstein
John Hawksley	Jack Mulhall
Cutty	David Torrence
Karlov	Wallace Berry
Olga	Maude George
Banker Buell	Eric Mayne

Mystery, romance and fascination surrounding the two most beautiful emeralds in the world, "The Drums of Jeopardy," are mingled in the screen production of that name, adapted from a Harold McGrath story, which comes to the Strand theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday with Elaine Hammerstein as the star.

The story opens in the atmosphere of a Russian castle where the jewels are recovered by their rightful owner, the young prince of a Russian house. He is tracked by bandits to America, where he falls in love with a New York girl, the daughter of a great banker, in whose care he has placed the jewels. A mysterious murder and two strange disappearances heighten the mystery of the production.

Crippled, But Not In Mind FATE DEFIED

ROSALIE
FREEDMAN

ARE you armless or legless? Paralyzed? Aren't you deaf or crippled in some way, no matter how slightly? No? Too bad. Your chances for success are much less. You are handicapped by not being handicapped.

Scientific investigation shows that best people are developed under hardships. The strongest races develop where the elements are most severe. This applies to the individual as well as the race.

Few sons of rich parents have developed greatly unless obstacles have been placed in their path. The greatest Americans have risen from the blackest depths.

Scores of persons physically handicapped have achieved success, great in comparison with their opportunity. Their disabilities have acted as an unconscious or conscious challenge. The challenge has been accepted.

"No man is crippled unless he is crippled in the head," typifies the attitude of the man or woman of courage who faces the world with an impairment of physical abilities. This remark was made by P. D. Chamberlain of San Francisco, Calif.

LEFT SCHOOL

Chamberlain lost both legs in a railroad accident when he was 14 years old. Unwilling to face his old companions, he left the public school. He started his own corner grocery store, but studied nights.

His studies made him a master of Latin and English. Then he became an expert auditor. Then he studied music, became a skilled violinist and a member of a number of orchestras.

Loss of his legs was a constant challenge to him.

He decided to study boxing. At the end of his course he knocked out his instructor.

Fifteen years ago he entered the glass products manufacturing business. Today he is wealthy by a chain of interests all over the country.

General Sir Walter Congreve has but one arm, but he has been appointed aid to King George of England. He lost his arm in the World War, but this failed to prevent him from rising to additional honors at the hands of his grateful majesty.

One of the most remarkable battles against physical defect has been won by Miss Martha Hale, a student at the University of California.

Miss Hale was born without arms. She was satisfied that she had feet. She taught them to do everything hands could do.

When she eats, and her personality is such that she is frequently invited out to dinners, she slips her feet out of her slippers and with grace and ease handles her knife and fork as well as the most skillful trencherman.

NOT A DROP LOST

She has no difficulty in reaching her mouth with her toes—she can lift a brimful glass of water to her lips without spilling a drop.

She is never embarrassed in public. Even when entering a street car she needs no help. She can slip her foot out of her slipper, balancing on one foot, take her purse out of her pocket, give the conductor a coin extracted by two toes, receive change and put her purse back again.

She can write well. She can cook her own meals. She can make blackboard demonstrations in her classes without difficulty.

She can perform all experiments in chemistry without trouble and takes the usual gymnasium course. She cannot do the arm exercises, of course, but she excels other girls in running and jumping tests.

In face of her condition, Miss Hale is seldom embarrassed. She takes it as a matter of course and makes the best of things, which is better than many girls who have two hands do.

DOESN'T MISS HANDS

"How can I miss what I've never had and therefore never needed?" she replies to questioners. Others have had the same handicap from birth that Miss Hale has—to be born without arms. It is an exceedingly rare condition, but it has been met almost as often with a spirit that has made the victim superior to the average individual.

Mrs. J. C. Teagarden of Denver, Colo., similarly afflicted, cared well for a child she bore. She boasted that she gave the child the same

MARTHA

care that any mother with two arms did. She made its clothes. She operated her sewing machine pedals with her feet, guiding the garments through it with her teeth.

She keeps her own house, cooking, making the beds and washing dishes. She is her own maid, being able to comb her hair with a comb held in her toes.

Her child was normally formed.

Two men without arms have, in Europe, won victory over their handicap. One man, known under his stage name of Elroy, is a marksman and musician. Holding his gun in his feet, he is able to shoot accurately. He plays the trumpet in the same fashion.

A little Bohemian child, known outside the medical world only as Frankie, is rapidly overcoming the disadvantages of being without arms. He is training his legs and feet.

ARMLESS PAINTER

Loss of arms in later life, a more frequent affliction, has been overcome in hundreds of cases. So many are there that but a few outstanding ones can be mentioned.

Rosalie Freedman, Philadelphia girl, lost her hands through illness. Yet she desired to paint. After tedious and trying practice she learned to wield a brush accurately by holding it in her teeth. She also learned to write, holding the pencil in her teeth.

Quentin D. Corley of Dallas, Tex., lost both arms in a railroad accident at the age of 21. He had been a stenographer and had been studying to become a railroad engineer.

He had artificial arms fitted for himself and studied law. At the age of 25 he was appointed justice of the peace and at 29 was elected superior judge of Dallas county, the youngest man to hold that honor.

Hugh Dickson of Los Angeles lost his arms in a railroad accident. He was admitted to the bar and became assistant United States district attorney as the result of a persevering battle against fate.

William Jones, a San Francisco landscape artist, lost both arms in an accident. He got artificial arms and kept right on painting landscapes. Critics pronounced some of his later works superior to his earlier productions.

MADE MORE MONEY

John P. Johnson, a Massachusetts fisherman, lost both arms. He built a highly profitable boat-renting business.

"While I might be still a fisherman, making little money, if I kept my arms," he declared.

Lack of legs has been even less of a handicap. Thousand have climbed the ladder of success by pulling themselves up with their hands.

Joe Sullivan, of the staff of the Brown Hospital School at Detroit, was paralyzed at the age of four. He could not walk, but got around by means of a pair of goats and a wagon. He became an editor and a mayor of an Arkansas town at the age of 20, quit mayoring to go to college, and abandoned the race for secretary of state to teach other crippled children.

Hazel Hall of Portland, Ore., a cripple since childhood, has won fame by her poetry.

Richard News, legless, toured the country from Milwaukee to San Diego in a three-wheeled automobile.

But greater is the plight of those who are not merely denied the use of arms and legs.

There is a number of persons condemned to lie in bed until they die.

Perhaps the most unusual is Mrs. Emma S. Bunnell of Hammond, Ind. For 39 years she has lain in bed. But she always longed for activity.

One day a friend asked her to sell a parcel of property. She arranged the deal over the telephone. This gave her new courage. She decided that if she could sell one piece of property she could sell others. She went into the real estate business, handling all her business over the telephone.

NELLIE REVELL

She became a sharp bargainer, making large profits for herself.

Many of her clients do not know that she is bedridden. Even those who have called upon her believe her to be only temporarily confined to her bed.

But she knows she will never arise.

LIVING FROM BED

In Seattle, Wash., and in Piqua, O., are two bed-sentenced men who have defied fate's efforts to make them dependents and are earning their living by selling magazines and taking subscriptions.

Dr. Frank Loope is the Seattle man. He does his business by telephone. He is also director general of the Sunshine Club. The Sunshine Club arranges to have people visit shut-ins throughout the city. He also edits "Sunshine," a small magazine carrying a message of cheer.

Newton H. Hill is the magazine man of Piqua. He operates by mail and his business has been no less successful than Dr. Loope's.

NELLIE REVEL'S BATTLE

Nellie Revel, one time known as "the world's greatest press agent," wrote a book during a four-year stay in a hospital.

"Right Off the Chest" is the name of her work. A publisher produced the book at cost as a tribute to the courage of the former publicity and newspaper woman. She wrote the book on a pad on her chest with a pencil suspended by a string from the ceiling.

A woman who did not walk until she was 39 is a scientist of international renown. She is a fellow of the Royal Microscopical Society of London, a fellow of the American Society for the Advancement of Science, a member of the New York Microscopical Society.

Her name is Mary A. Booth. She lives in Springfield, Mass.

BORN TO SCIENCE

She was an invalid from childhood. Her father was a mineralogist. Seeking an outlet for the energy pent up in her, denied an escape in the play of other girls, she turned to science. She was able to afford equipment, her father having gathered a small fortune.

These people who have attained their goal in spite of their physical handicaps prove the theory that such handicaps are an impelling challenge.

But each one of them proves the value of happiness.

Every one mentioned is happy, happier than the average person.

Perhaps that is because they are successful. But it is probable that the reason is that they determined to be happy first.

This determination was burned into them by the awfulness of the position and this happiness has made their success possible.

Gen. Sir WALTER
CONGREVE

Also in Sports

BEING crippled has not kept men out of the world of active sports.

Golf, swimming, tennis and baseball have their limbless followers.

Golf has called to many. Harry Turner of Canada is totally blind, a victim of the World War. His caddy tees the ball and describes the direction. He seldom misses a shot completely. His greatest trouble is on the greens, where his number of shots mount up, but, in spite of this, he made 105 on an 18-hole course.

Tom McAuliffe is armless except for two short stumps. Yet by holding the club in teeth or between his chin and shoulder he is able to make shots accurately. Distance, however, is almost impossible, but, in spite of that, he enjoys the game.

ONE ARM

Louis Martucci of New York plays golf with his right arm only. His left is gone. He has made 18 holes in 68, a good mark for two-handed players.

Martucci played a tournament recently with Yves Boucazon, similarly crippled, who claims to be the champion one-armed golf player of France. He is also a skilled player.

Jack Allen enters the Ohio state golf tournaments annually. He, too, has but one arm. Ed Reilly of Chicago is a professional player, who claims 71 as a low record.

John Funk of El Reno, Okla., is another on the list of one-armed golfers.

One-legged golfers are common, the best known being Alex Jones, a British professional. He hands his crutch to his caddy, balances on one foot and slams the ball.

PLAYS TENNIS

Clarence M. Charest of Baltimore, Md., is a one-armed tennis player. He was one member of the team that won the doubles at the middle Atlantic section of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association in 1921.

Charles Gallagher, one-armed center fielder, frequently played against the team of Jack Quick, first baseman, in the sandlots of Sacramento, Calif.

Quick has the use of but one leg. He balances himself on his good leg, covering first in good style. He bats in the same manner, but a substitute runs bases for him.

HIGH AVERAGES

Gallagher's batting and fielding averages have been high.

When he catches a ball in his hand he slips it under the stump of his other arm, shakes off the glove, takes the ball in his hand again and pegs the ball wherever it is most needed. He has become skilled in these motions and is as useful on the field as any other member of the team.

Unique is the skill of Jack Ryan, who has no legs.

He has learned to swim and can propel himself through the water at an amazing speed.

History, too, recounts the accomplishments of those who forged to the front in the face of physical impediments of one kind or another.

The silver-tongued Demosthenes handed eloquence down to posterity and became the greatest orator of the Grecian world although his speech as a youth was imperfect.

He sought the ocean as an auditor and spoke to the roar of the waves with pebbles in his mouth that he might break the spell with which birth had shackled his tongue.

Famed Milton gave his "Paradise Lost" as a poetic treasure to the world through sightless eyes. And his name will live forever in the thesaurus of human thought though he never saw a line of what he wrote.

GRAND JURY IS DRAWN IN 60TH

Judge Campbell Changes View for New Term

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—A new grand jury for the coming term was drawn here Saturday afternoon with H. M. Hargrove, and John L. Pipkin, Beaumont and C. T. Baker, Port Arthur, forming the jury commission. It was at first planned to pass the present term without a grand jury, but Judge J. D. Campbell of the 60th district court decided to take such action would throw a great deal of criminal work in the 58th district court which will have a grand jury in December. The last grand jury adjourned about three weeks ago after turning in more than 200 bills.

NO DECISION IN JOHN LAND CASE

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—After several hours deliberation, the jury in the case of Miss Billie Smith and Johnny Land, both of Port Arthur, was unable to come to a decision. The two were charged with possession of liquor for the purpose of sale. C. M. Backham and T. Scroggins were arresting officers in the case and two quarts of gin and one pint of whiskey was alleged to have been taken at the time. Less than one quart of gin was introduced as evidence, however, this morning, and officers stated they did not know where the other liquor had gone. Both defendants entered a plea of not guilty to the charge.

NEED PSYCHOLOGIST TO SOLVE THIS ONE

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—Services of a psychologist are needed by the Beaumont health department to explain why boy babies invariably receive the name of their father, while girls rarely ever are given their mother's name.

The local department keeps a record of all births. During the present month, there were 21 babies born to couples that had no other children. Of this, nine were boys and nine were girls. Of the 12 boys 10 of them were given their father's name, plus a junior. Not a single girl baby was given her mother's name.

18 CRIMINAL CASES ARE DISPOSED OF

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—Eighteen criminal cases were disposed of by Judge O'Brien in the 58th district court here the past week. Of the 18 cases, four were found not guilty, two were dismissed, there were two suspended sentences and the balance were convicted.

Judge O'Brien has 18 more cases set for hearing beginning Monday morning. With the exception of three, all are for liquor law violations.

SHERIFF RECEIVES ELECTION NOTICES

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—Election notices were received this morning by the sheriff's department and will be posted in every voting precinct, according to law. The election provides for naming of the president, vice president, United States senator and member of congress in addition to the state officers.

TWO WOMEN, MAN AND CAR HELD

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—An Essex coach was added to the collection of confiscated automobiles by the sheriff's department this morning. Deputy Sheriff Artie Pollock arrested two women and one man, charging them with transporting liquor and took the car as well. All were released on the filing of $500 bond. One of the women gave her address as New Orleans, but the other man and woman have lived in Beaumont for some time.

DAVIS-BRYAN BODY FUND

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—Appointments on the Davis-Bryan campaign committee fund will be completed by H. M. Hargrove the early part of next week. M. L. Clayton, head of the drive in Texas has asked that $250,000 be contributed from this state and appointed H. M. Hargrove as chairman of the Jefferson county committee. Other committee men from Port Arthur, Beaumont, Port Neches, Nederland and China will be named by Hargrove.

M'Neal Legal Papers Are Sent to Austin

BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—Legal documents in the George McNeal case were sent to Austin by express this morning in order that they might be in the hands of the higher court by Sunday. Included in the documents was 142 pages of the original evidence offered in the case. McNeal was given a death sentence her following conviction on a charge of criminal assault, and the case is being taken to a higher court. Following the rule followed in former cases, Attorneys Howth and O'Neil have maintained that the jury wheel was not properly filled from which the names of the jurors were drawn, and this is one of the many reasons for which they are asking a new trial.

60 PER CENT RICE CROP IN

Farmers Asked to Hold For Better Prices

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—More than 60 per cent of the Jefferson county rice crop is in and rice farmers may expect to make up for some of the loss on rice they have sustained in previous years. There are about 18,000 acres of rice in Jefferson county, according to figures of the American Rice Growers' association.

The association has asked farmers, however, to keep their rice until a better price is offered for it. Buyers from Houston and New Orleans the past week bid $4.71 for Lady Wright and offered $4.07 for Japan, off grades. Bidding has been rather slow, although a number of millers were present and A. H. Boyd, head of the association here, declared in his opinion the rice should be stored in order that the farmers could wait for a better market.

BLAINEY NAMED CIA PRESIDENT

Succeeds Late Chief, Dr. F. M. Bralley

DENTON, Texas, Sept. 27.—Dr. Lindsey Blainey, professor of German language at Rice Institute, Houston, Texas, was elected President of the College of Industrial Arts of Denton, after an all-day session of the board of regents of the college here today.

Blainey will succeed Dr. F. M. Bralley who died recently. Dr. Bralley served as colonel with the American Expeditionary forces in the world war and comes to Denton with high recommendations.

BEAUMONT TO SEEK AIR LANDING FIELD

BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—Two men will be sent to Beaumont by the postal department at Washington with reference to establishing a landing field here. A proposal for an air mail service between the United States and the canal zone is under consideration and Mayor J. Austin Barnes communicated with authorities at Washington, asking that Beaumont be considered for establishing a landing field.

HABEAS WRIT IS FILED FOR SHELTON

BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—Application for a writ of habeas corpus was filed in the district court here today by Attorney Rose for Roy Shelton. According to the petition which is brought by R. J. Lyons for Shelton, he is being kept in the Port Arthur jail on advice from the chief of police of Phoenix, Arizona, but that he does not know why he is being restrained of his liberty.

PLANS FOR K. OF P. INITIATION FORMED

Preliminary plans for the Knights of Pythias initiation to be held in Port Arthur the early part of November are already under way. More than 150 candidates for membership in the organization will be taken in at that time and visitors from all parts of Southeast Texas are expected to take part in the ceremonial. A parade will be held as part of the activities. C. M. Wheelton is chairman of the entertainment committee.

150 INITIATED INTO KLAN IN BEAUMONT

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—An outdoor initiation was held at the fair grounds park here Friday night, at which time between 150 and 200 candidates were taken into the Ku Klux Klan order. It was the first time an initiation has been held at the park for a period of several months.

COURT WRIT PROTECTS KYLE

Labor Halted From Show Interference

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 28.—Interested labor unions are prohibited from interfering with the management of the Kyle theater by an order of Judge J. D. Campbell in 60th district court here this afternoon.

The Jefferson Amusement company operating the Tivoli and Liberty theaters here recently took over the management of the Kyle theater after the former manager had filed bankruptcy proceedings. Several years ago following some trouble with labor unions, the Tivoli and Liberty theater started operating on an "open shop" basis, and it is their intention to run the Kyle theater on the same plan, although under the old management only union labor was employed.

Petition Granted Today

According to the petition filed this afternoon and granted, the officials of the Jefferson Amusement company declare they have reason to believe the members of theatrical stage employees and motion picture operators unions intend to interfere with the management of the new theater. They also declare that the officials of the labor union are having handbills printed and that they intend picketing the new theater.

The injunction signed by Judge Campbell provides that the labor unions cannot interfere or go near the properties of the Jefferson Amusement company for the purpose of inducing any person not to enter the theater and also prohibiting them from picketing the theater or distributing hand bills.

DRAUGHT BLOCKS SABINE TRUCKERS

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—Port Arthurians will probably have to do without their regular fall garden truck from Sabine, according to J. C. Eisentraut, county agricultural agent. He stated this morning that truck farmers on the Sabine ridges ordinarily planted their gardens in September, but on account of the dry weather they had not prepared the ground yet. Most of the garden truck is sold in Port Arthur, but ships at Sabine also purchase vegetables from the farmers in that vicinity.

CHILDREN SHOW IMPROVED HEALTH

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 27.—Health conditions among children in Jefferson county are greatly improved, according to J. D. Blevins, county health officer. Examinations of the children in the Nederland, South Park, Hampshire, China and French schools were held last week. Dr. Blevins stated that the pupils and parents are all co-operating in the health work and results of last year's work are plainly shown by a comparison of health conditions a year ago.

CAUSE OF COTTON BLIGHT DETERMINED

VICTORIA, Sept. 27.—Texas A and M. College authorities have eased the puzzlement of planters in this section as to the appearance of so many patches of dead cotton in their fields. The experts declared a fungus disease had been discovered known as Texas root rot, which attacks the roots of the plants.

An early fall cleanup of all cotton stalks and clean cultivation during the winter are recommended for the disease. Crop rotation is also urged.

CLINIC FOR BABES AT RED CROSS HUT

A health clinic for babies up to 7 years in age will be held at the Red Cross hut, Fifth street and Dallas avenue, Monday afternoon, from 2 until 4 o'clock with a local physician assisted by Mrs. W. L. Jackson, Red Cross nurse, in attendance. Red Cross officials said Saturday.

LAFOLLETTE PLANS NEW SPEAKING TOUR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Senator LaFollette, tonight was working out details of his forthcoming speaking tour.

For two days the head of the independent ticket has been in close touch with his managers in New York and Chicago, while final plans for the trip were considered.

The exact itinerary probably will not be announced until Monday.

10,000 Highway Maps Ready for Distribution

FORT WORTH, Sept. 27.—Preparation to distribute 10,000 large highway maps, 43x60 inches, throughout Texas are being made by the Texas Highway association, it was announced here today by W. T. Wheeler, secretary.

The maps show at a glance the progress of highway construction in this state, as well as the huge amount of work yet to be done before Texas can boast of a "connected comprehensive highway system."

Eighteen thousand miles of designated highways are shown in four colors, each color representing the stage of improvement which has been reached. The designated highways are a part of the 180,000-mile good roads program of the federal government.

The maps are now being printed and distribution will start as soon as deliveries are made. They will be sent to all chambers of commerce, banks, court houses and other places, and to others who desire them.

TAX LEAGUE TO NAME OFFICERS

Women Expected Out at Wednesday Meet

With the number of women's committees out arousing interest in the efforts of the Port Arthur Poll Tax League, devoted to increasing the number of qualified voters in the city and getting out a larger number of voters at the polls, a record attendance of women and men is expected for the organization and election of officers meeting scheduled for Wednesday night, October 1, in Waco park, at Waco avenue and Seventh street, A. F. Babin, chairman said Saturday.

"Every one interested in a greater Port Arthur is invited to attend the meetings of the poll tax league," Babin said Saturday.

NO RANGERS WANTED TO GUARD NEGRO

AUSTIN, Sept. 27.—The adjutant general's department it was said that no requests had been received from Lavaca county authorities for rangers to aid in the protection of Alex Foley, negro, in jail at Hallettsville and who is reported to have confessed to the murder of Isadore E. Matejek. The tragedy occurred Thursday night in Matejek's soft drink stand at Hallettsville. If rangers are asked for, they will be sent from San Antonio, it was stated.

OFFICE ANNEX AT NEDERLAND RUSHED

NEDERLAND, Texas, Sept. 27.—The office building annex to the Twin Cities Drug store building will be ready for occupancy by the middle of this week, according to Postmaster J. R. Ware, who is erecting the building. Several office spaces are in the building. Berrough and Newton, real estate men, will occupy one office, another space will be taken up by a barber shop, while Dr. McAlpin, dentist, is expected to take another space. Five office spaces are in the building.

COUNTERFEITER

Marshallite Found With Spurious Coins

MARSHALL, Texas, Sept. 27.—Officers here tonight were holding Bynum Russell, alleged counterfeiter, for federal authorities following his arrest here early today in which spurious coins and counterfeiting material was captured.

Russell admitted ownership of the equipment, officers said. Several "phony" coins have been found in circulation here in the last few weeks. State Rangers made the arrest.

BERRY SILENT ON INJUNCTION

Makes No Comment On Ferguson Case

AUSTIN, Sept. 27.—Judge E. A. Berry of Houston, state democratic chairman who is in Austin today, declined to discuss the Ferguson injunction case which has been taken under advisement by District Judge George Calhoun. He would not say that "Texas will not have government by injunction," but he did say that "Texas will not have government by conjunction."

Prediction was made by Berry that Texas democrats would "roll up their usual brutal majority for the national and state tickets in November, from top to bottom without exception."

Berry and Dr. George C. Butte, the republican nominee for governor met in the state capital and chatted pleasantly for a few minutes.

Klan Denounced By Colorado Democrats

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 27.—The Colorado democratic party late this afternoon adopted a state platform vigorously denouncing the Ku Klux Klan by name.

"We condemn invisible government and all efforts on the part of any individual, group or organization to inject questions of religious belief or church affiliations into American politics, to attempt to establish directly or indirectly a religious or a racial test as a qualification for the holding of public office," the plank said.

Nederland Ready To Boost Good Roads

Special to The News.

NEDERLAND, Texas, Sept. 27.—Nederland people stand ready to back any movement for better roads in Jefferson county and are waiting to follow the lead, according to leading men in the Chamber of Commerce here. Better roads have been discussed in the Chamber of Commerce meetings several times.

Any movement would be chiefly for the benefit of Precinct 2, it is claimed here, and would gain the full support of Nederland.

Will Ask Transfer Of Buffalo Herd

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 27.—Uncle Sam will be asked to transfer to the native grazing ground of the American buffalo, in the Two Medicine and Cut Bank valleys, now a part of Glacier National Park, Montana, some of his surplus herds which have multiplied so rapidly in Yellowstone Park that their pastures there no longer are adequate for their maintenance. Last month some of these buffalo were given away to the Canadian government and now the Blackfoot Indians think they are entitled to as much consideration as a foreign people.

Writers Will Choose Best Vote Cartoon

Six prominent political writers and a representative of the league have been named to pick the winner of a cartoon contest now being conducted by the National League of Women Voters as a part of its get-out-the-vote campaign. The judges who will select the published cartoon "best calculated to arouse general interest in voting and increase attendance at the polls," are Brule Bliven, Miss Elizabeth Frazer, William Hard, David Lawrence, Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson, William Allen White and Miss Katherine Ludington.

SAPIO TO ADDRESS FARMERS AT FAIR

Aarn Sapiro, nationally known authority on co-operative marketing of farm products and widely acquainted personally and by reputation throughout the state of Texas, will address Texas at the state fair, October 16 according to an announcement by John T. Orr, president of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton association. October 16 has been designated as Texas Farm Bureau Cotton association day by fair officials, and plans are being made to care for 10,000 association members and their friends.

Dr. C. Y. Bailey Is Promoted to Captain

Promotion of Dr. C. Y. Bailey, U. S. public health surgeon stationed in Port Arthur, to the rank of captain in the U. S. P. H. service was reported Saturday by Dr. T. J. Liddell, U. S. public health surgeon, in charge of the Sabine district. Dr. Bailey recently took the examination for the higher rank at Galveston.

WOUNDS WIFE; NEIGHBOR; HELD

Cainesville Man Uses Scissors, Gun in Brawl

GAINESVILLE, Texas, Sept. 27.—J. M. Glidewell, was held here tonight in connection with the shooting of his wife and Mrs. Matilda Dresbach, neighbor, last night.

Mrs. Glidewell was shot in the back with a revolver as she ran from home after her husband had attacked her with a pair of scissors. Pursuing his wife to the home of Mrs. Dresbach, officers said Glidewell fired through the window with a shotgun, slightly wounding Mrs. Dresbach.

The shooting occurred shortly after Glidewell had been released from jail where he had been held pending mental examination and was pronounced sane.

GOKE SAYS LIBERALS TO GET BIG VOTE

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 27.—Thomas P. Gore, blind democratic leader of Oklahoma and former United States senator, today predicted the success of the LaFollette movement.

"Senator LaFollette will receive a tremendous popular vote and also some electoral votes. I am satisfied that the movement he represents has come to stay," he said.

Department Club Luncheon on Monday, October, 6, to Open Fall Club Activities

FALL TO WITNESS SOCIAL IMPETUS

250 Club Women Welcome Season's Opening

NOW, that the early fall season is again with us, people are discarding their bathing suits and tennis racquets for the more strenuous, if not quite so healthful, life of the city, and every day local fashionables are arriving to take up their abode for the winter months.

Autumn weddings, which still hold the calendar, keep well-wishing friends on the go to luncheons, teas and dinners. From early indications, that is from the dates already planned, it looks as though Port Arthur will see a lively winter.

October 1 brings the annual club year, which is welcomed by more than two hundred and fifty club women in the city. Club activities will begin in earnest on this date and the attractive club books which the Department club is presenting prove that a full year is ahead of all the club women.

The first session of the Department Club will be held on Monday, October 6, in the form of a luncheon at the club house at 1 o'clock. The business session, which will follow the luncheon, promises to be unusually interesting and a stimulus for the coming club year.

The luncheon will be served by members of the Civic club, and the proceeds will go toward liquidating the debt on the Civic club park. Mrs. C. T. Baker, vice president, is acting as president in the absence of the president, Mrs. J. B. Saint. Reservations for the luncheon may be made with the secretaries of the various clubs, and members will be privileged to invite guests to the luncheon.

One of the features of the luncheon will be the musical numbers, by the Joymakers orchestra, which will be comprised of five pieces on this occasion.

Mrs. K. A. Young, president of the Department Club, will preside at the business session, which will follow the luncheon. Other officers of the club include Mrs. R. L. Drake, vice president; Mrs. E. M. Friel, recording secretary; Mrs. L. T. Brooks, corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. K. Goodwin, treasurer; and Mrs. G. H. Fubank, parliamentarian. ## Mrs. W. A. Martin's Home Opened For Attractive Entertainment Thursday

THE attractive home of Mrs. W. A. Martin in the Dryden Addition was opened to the women of the First M. E. church, South, Thursday afternoon, and more than one hundred and twenty guests called during the hours of receiving.

The home, situated near the canal in the Dryden Addition, is ideally located for such entertainments, and during the afternoon hours the guests enjoyed victrola music and delightful contests on the spacious lawn.

A lovely pink and white motif was selected by the hostesses to feature the charming hospitality, with baskets of beautiful pink radishes roses and coral vine lending their beauty to enhance the attractive furnishings of the home and to give touches of color at vantage points about the lawn. Twenty tables prettily decorated with the coral vine and lace fern were assembled on the lawn and as a means of getting the guests acquainted progressive conversation was enjoyed.

Mrs. H. H. Brown received the prize awarded to the one remembering the most names of those with whom she conversed. Musical selections on the victrola were also enjoyed.

Assisting Mrs. Martin in receiving the guests at the door were Mrs. H. F. Banker, president of the Missionary society, and Mrs. E. P. Baker, while Mrs. R. G. Robertson received them at the foot of the stairs and Mrs. M. F. Bledsoe and Mrs. Henry Crawford greeted them on the lawn. The lovely home was also opened to the guests with Mrs. W. A. Martin receiving in her apartment; Mrs. R. Stafford in her apartment; Mrs. Stewart Martin, in her apartment.

A dainty ice course was served during the late hours of the afternoon by the hostesses, who included Mrs. M. F. Bledsoe, Mrs. E. P. Baker, Mrs. R. G. Robertson, Mrs. G. Winn, Mrs. Charles Hughes, Mrs. P. C. Blair, Mrs. Henry Crawford, Mrs. Stewart Martin, and Mrs. W. A. Martin.

IN THE PICTURES

TODAY'S pictures are the pretty Port Arthur maids who will attend the Sons of Confederate Veterans annual reunion, which convenes in Fort Worth on November 30 and October 1 and 2. They leave for Fort Worth tomorrow evening.

Miss Mattie Smith, who has been chosen as sponsor of the second brigade, is a charming young woman who is widely known in Port Arthur. She is the youngest daughter of A. B. Smith of 1940 Seventh street.

Misses Thelma Tanner and Lucia Beauchamp will attend the reunion as Miss Smith's maids of honor. Both are attractive Port Arthur girls. Miss Tanner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Tanner of 1648 Tenth street.

Misses Lila Dycus and Maurine Shivers, two of Port Arthur's prettiest sub-debs, have been named as junior maids of honor to Miss Smith. Miss Dycus is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. A. W. Dycus, and Miss Shivers is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. R. A. Shivers. (All photos by Miss Woods Studio.)

Officers Elected By Society

Mrs. C. V. Palmer was elected president of the Foreign Missionary society Thursday afternoon at the business session held at the First Methodist Episcopal church.

Other officers who will serve with Mrs. Palmer are Mrs. W. Streeter, vice president; Mrs. C. W. Rodgers, secretary; Mrs. J. M. Latham, treasurer and Mrs. George E. Carter, corresponding secretary.

Due to the election of offices the lesson study for the afternoon was dispensed with and only the business session was held. In the years

FEDERATED BOARD TO MEET TONDAY

The executive board of the Federated Missionary society will meet Monday afternoon with Mrs. G. H. Eubank at her home, 2301 Lake Shore drive.

Mrs. R. R. Yelderman of the First Christian church will have charge of the devotional service on this occasion. It is hoped that a large attendance of the members will be present Monday.

Those in attendance were Mrs. W. Streeter, Mrs. J. A. Paschal, Mrs. Charles Stevenson, Mrs. C. A. McDonald, Mrs. Bert Hughes, Mrs. B. Glicksburg, Mrs. F. A. Bushong, Mrs. C. W. Rodgers, Mrs. E. J. Smith, Mrs. C. V. Palmer, Mrs. J. M. Latham, Mrs. F. A. Montgomery, Mrs. George E. Carter, Mrs. P. S. DeWitt and Mrs. Cora Bunker.

MAIDS IN OLD TIME CONCERT

Ancient Numbers Sung By Pretty Bevis

PAGES of history were turned back twenty-five and fifty years Thursday evening at the First Christian church when the choir, under the direction of C. N. Bier, assisted by local talent, presented The Old Time Concert before an appreciative audience. The entertainment proved one of the most pleasing events of the past week.

Mrs. R. D. Brown had charge of the program, which opened with a bass solo, "The Bell in the Lighthouse Kings," by Neal Rader, who responded to an encore with "A Bowl of Roses." Mr. Rader was at his best on this occasion, and piano accompaniment was given by E. H. McGuire.

The vocal duet and encore given by Misses Wee Wee Griffin and Gladys Garrett, with violin obligato by Mrs. Adrian Gorman, were graciously received, both Miss Griffin and Miss Garrett wearing stunning old-fashioned costumes.

Mrs. Carl T. Long pleased her listeners in a solo and encore, Mrs. Long in powdered hair and attractive old-fashioned costume, being a pictorial visualization.

Mrs. J. E. Graunier was pretty in hoop skirt and charming costume and her rendition of "The Last Rose of Summer," and "Can't You Hear Me Callin', Caroline," appealing.

The duet sung by C. V. Palmer and daughter, Miss Beth Palmer, was heartily applauded and encored. "Poor Old Ned" was doubly pleasing. Mr. Palmer, dressed as a colonel, was perfect in his disguise, and Miss Palmer's costume was indeed old-fashioned, her gown was an ancient heirloom, with a tight-fitting bodice and long sweeping skirt with train entirely trimmed in ruffles. ## Woman's Auxiliary Of First Baptist Church In Interesting Meet

MRS. JOE CORTHELL, retiring president of the Woman's Auxiliary of the First Baptist church, was presented with a beautiful W. M. U. pin, Thursday at the all day session of the Auxiliary at the church, the presentation being made by Mrs. S. M. Humphrey on behalf of the Auxiliary for Mrs. Corthell's faithful service to the Auxiliary during her two years' presidency.

The presentation was made during the afternoon session, which opened with devotional service, led by Mrs. J. M. Reagan of the Central Baptist church, following which Mrs. S. R. Nicks of the Central church made a short talk of appreciation for the hospitality extended the Central church by the First church and told of the fellowship and co-operation existing between the two churches.

The business session followed and reports of the various officers and committees were given and the apportionments for the year were accepted.

Installation of the new officers featured the afternoon meeting, these officers including Mrs. G. W. Stewart, president; Mrs. E. S. Rich, vice president; Mrs. N. D. Hampton, recording secretary; Mrs. Hampton, assistant secretary and publicity chairman. The resignation of Mrs. F. G. Peck as treasurer and Mrs.

S. M. Humphrey was appointed to continue in her capacity as treasurer. (Turn to Page 12, Column 2)

Altar Society Entertained On Thursday

Mrs. A. Dryden, Mrs. George Stiehl and Mrs. George C. Sculley were gracious hostesses to the Altar society of St. Mary's Catholic church Thursday afternoon at the Knights of Columbus hall.

At the business session Mrs. V. R. Suttle, Mrs. L. K. Barras, Sr., and Mrs. V. L. Ross were admitted into membership of the Altar society. Mrs. Ross, formerly of Beaumont, told of the Parent-Teacher's association in the Altar society in that city, and urged the women to consider such an organization here. At the close of the business session, the hostesses served a tasty ice course.

Those in attendance were Mrs. A. J. Krohn, president; Mrs. John T. Ferguson, vice president; Mrs. John Bammert, Mrs. N. Garcia, Mrs. P. J. Doyle, Mrs. J. D. Cappel, Mrs. George C. Sculley, Mrs. A. H. Barras, Mrs. N. H. Breaux, Mrs. R. A. Houston, Mrs. George Stiehl, Miss Beulah Laughlin, Mrs. James McLaughlin, Mrs. J. A. Guilmont, Mrs. Theo. Gentil, Mrs. V. L. Ross, Mrs. Theo. Placette, Mrs. L. T. Marshbanks, Mrs. V. R. Suttle, Mrs. W. Billeaud, Mrs. S. J. Larkin, Mrs. L. McGuire, Mrs. F. Craft and Mrs. R. H. Armstrong.

The next meeting of the Altar society will be held on October 9 with Mrs. Theo. Placette, Mrs. E. H. Rogers and Mrs. Ben Simon as hostesses.

MRS. BURLINGHAM REMOVED HOME

Mrs. J. A. Burlingham was removed to her home, 927 Stillwell boulevard, yesterday afternoon after a successful operation at Mary Gates hospital, where she has been confined the past two weeks.

EASTERN STAR TO MEET IN CALLED SESSION

The Eastern Star will meet in called session Monday evening at the Masonic hall at 7:30 o'clock to entertain several of the grand officers. All members are urged to be present and all visiting members in the city are cordially invited to attend the affair.

MAIDS IN OLD

were an antique red plaid silk shawl and her hat, a bonnet affair, was well suited to her attire. Their numbers were enthusiastically received.

Mrs. H. Claud Holmes, who played the piano accompaniment for Mrs. Wof-i, was charming in a Martha Washington costume.

Mrs. Harrison Fisher was beautiful in an evening dress of rich attire and her double reading was indeed delightful. Her dialect of the negro preacher was perfect and she held her audience spellbound during her reading.

Little Loreah Davis sang two numbers, and was accompanied on the piano by her mother, Mrs. Bill Davis. Both were dressed in old fashioned costumes, little Miss Loreah making an unusually dainty little lady.

The minstrel act concluded the evening's program, and afforded much amusement for the audience. The scene was laid at the home of Parson Johnson, who was living alone with his daughter and Aunt Dina, a widow, who thought he should be her suitor, called at their home with most of her children. She did everything but propose to Parson Johnson and her manner of introducing her children as special artists for the entertainment of the parson was unusually effective.

The following cast, the blackest of the black, took part in the minstrel.

Parson Johnson—J. H. Baxter.
Daughter, Liza—Miss Wee Wee Griffin.
Aunt Dina—Guy Johnson.
Her children—Topey, Mrs. Lee Summers; Cotton, Mr. Fredrick; Mose, R. D. Brown; Angel Face, D. T. Booger; The Twins, Henry, a crippled negro, C. N. Bier, and Henrietta, Mrs. Dewey Bostie; and the baby, Lorea Davis.

The entertainment netted a neat sum, which was placed in the balcony fund of the local church.

until election of a new officer.

During the morning session a delightful program on "Our State" was rendered, and opened with the devotional service by Mrs. Travis Lambert, who gave a most inspirational talk on "The Power of Prayer." An interesting talk on the subject was made by Mrs. W. P. Irwin, and the program, being given in connection with the prayer service, consisted mostly of prayers, which were given by Mrs. G. W. Stewart, Mrs. S. M. Humphrey, Mrs. W. S. Thomas, Mrs. C. W. Culp and Mrs. A. W. Dycus. A lovely solo by Mrs. Lambert and a charming duet by Mrs. C. W. Culp and Mrs. O. A. Groves were the musical numbers on the program.

At noon a delicious luncheon was served to sixty members and guests, included among whom were Mrs. G. D. Duhon, Mrs. G. W. Stewart, Mrs. F. T. Outlaw and daughter, Mary Dycus; Mrs. G. W. Strickland, Mrs. M. A. Umberger, Mrs. W. E. Hood, Mrs. Dobrick, Mrs. R. E. Carter, Mrs. S. E. White, Mrs. E. V. Wilkinson, Mrs. E. J. Defoy, Mrs. Sidney Blanchard, Mrs. S. M. Humphrey, Mrs. E. O. WOODMEN CIRCLE TEAM TO REHEARSE

The drill team of the Woodmen Circle will meet at the hall in Hartford building Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, to practice for initiation Thursday evening. Mrs. J. D. Moore, captain of the team, requests a full attendance of the team members and all others interested in the team on Wednesday afternoon.

Stitches Club Entertained By Miss Burnham

Miss Laurella Burnham delightfully entertained the members of the Stitches club Thursday evening at her home, 2017 Sixth street.

The home was attractively adorned with a profusion of beautiful pink and white roses, the pink and white theme showing with pretty effect in all other details of the entertainment. After an enjoyable evening of dainty needlework and chatting, the hostess offered a refreshing ice course, which displayed the chosen theme in attractive manner.

Those enjoying the pleasing affair were Mrs. Joq Gorin and little son Raymond, Mrs. Wilbur Abbey and little daughter May Elizabeth, Mrs. H. Dailey Terrell and little son Burnham, Mrs. W. E. Follette, Mrs. A. J. Beard and little son Charles Slatten, Mrs. Ne Cochran, Miss Blanche Taylor, Mrs. J. A. Burnham and Miss Laurella Burnham.

Misses Leonora Latimer will be the club's hostess at her home in Griffing's Residential Park on Thursday evening, October 9.

SURPRISE SHOWER GIVEN MRS. GEORGE

A delightful affair of the week was the surprise shower given Mrs. George at her home, 1340 Fifth street, Friday afternoon by members of the Five Hundred club.

While Mrs. George was least expecting any callers, her friends assembled on the front porch and made a loud noise. Upon going to the door she was greatly surprised to find so many friends calling on her, still greater was her surprise when they presented her with a handsome basket filled with many dainty little gifts.

The interesting diversion of five hundred was enjoyed during the afternoon, three tables of players enjoying the games in which Mrs. R. H. Armstrong scored high and received the first prize. Mrs. George was awarded the second favor and consolation fell to Mrs. E. C. Kuhlman. A dainty ice course was served at the close of the games.

The personnel of players enjoying the charming hospitality were Mrs. R. H. Armstrong, Mrs. L. L. Bille-

Joymakers Play For Delightful Dance Friday

The dance at the Department club Friday evening proved one of the most delightful affairs of the past week and was attended by eighty-two couples.

To tuneful musical selections rendered during the evening by the Joy-makers, the guests enjoyed a series of delightful dance numbers from 9 o'clock, the dance being featured by a repetition of the "moonlight dance," which was given last Friday evening. Roger William Archer sang during this special number, and also rendered two other pleasing vocal selections. These numbers were enthusiastically received by the dancers.

Chaperones for Friday evening's entertainment included Mrs. K. A. Young, Mrs. C. L. Wignall and Mrs. Frank Y. Low.

On next Friday evening the Joy-makers will play for a similar dance at the club house, the hours being from 9 to 12 o'clock.

Mrs. O. L. Lantz Hostess To Whilers Club

A gracious affair of the past week was Mrs. O. L. Lantz's entertainment of the Whilers club at her home on Twelfth street Thursday afternoon.

In entertaining the club Mrs. Lantz selected a motif of pink and white to feature the pleasing affair, lovely rosebuds of the chosen hues giving floral charm to the rooms given over to the hospitality.

Three tables of players were assembled for the afternoon's diversion of five hundred, and in the games Mrs. B. E. Lashly received the prize for high score and the favor for low score was awarded to Mrs. V. A. Clark. A tempting ice course, reflecting the pink and white theme, was served at the close of the games.

A short business session followed, at which time the resignation of Mrs. A. M. Korn as president of the club was accepted and Mrs. G. S. Moody was elected to fill the vacancy.

Players for the afternoon included Mrs. E. E. Follette, Mrs. Neut Reese, Mrs. J. T. Frost, Mrs. Robert Draughn, Mrs. B. E. Lashly, Mrs. G. S. Moody, Mrs. N. F. Pray, Mrs. V. A. Clark, Mrs. R. E. Word, Mrs. Ivy Carrier, and Mrs. O. L. Lantz.

On next Wednesday evening the club will entertain with a card party on the lawn of Mrs. V. A. Clark's home on Thomas boulevard, at 8 o'clock.

The next regular club session will be held on Thursday afternoon, October 9, with Mrs. B. E. Lashly as hostess at the Zeck apartments on Mobile avenue.

Miss Desmond's Criminal

By Elizabeth Jordan

He Was a Tall Young Man—The Intruder—in Evening Dress, With a Look and Voice of Race and Breeding

ALLEN DESMOND started, opened her eyes, and blinked uncertainly at her surroundings. They were the familiar ones of her bedroom, looming reassuringly out of the semi-gloom. Somewhere in her apartment a clock struck one. It was annoying to wake at that hour, but she was not yet wholly out of the deep abyss of sleep in which she had been plunged. Possibly she could sink back into it again. And yet far down within her some subconscious instinct warned that all was not as normal as it seemed. She had been awakened by a sound—an unusual sound it must have been, for she was in the habit of sleeping peacefully through such minor annoyances as flapping curtains, the creaking of unlatched doors, or even the pad of heavy feet in the apartment above her own. Her upstairs neighbors kept late hours. But this had been something different, and something quite new. Allen lay very still, feeling more intensely awake with every second that passed, and considering the matter.

With a grimace at her own expense she admitted that she was nervous. She had run into town for a day's shopping, leaving her mother in their country home; and, though she had realized that the caretaker of the apartment was never in at night, it had not struck Allen that she herself would object to being there alone. The place was aired and in order and altogether much more comfortable than a hotel. She could have her breakfast the next morning in the ground floor restaurant of the building. The passenger elevator ran all night, and if she desired the soothing knowledge that human companionship was near she could get it from the sound of the recurrent opening and closing of the elevator doors. The night elevator operator was a strong and willing worker, and he had never acquired drowsiness in the handling of those doors. But now, though Allen listened, she missed the usual carefree crashing and banging that accompanied his trips. Even the night hawks of the big apartment house must be in by this time, and probably the elevator man was snatching a nap.

All these reassuring reflections passed through Miss Desmond's mind in much less time than it takes to set them down. Nevertheless, she found herself shivering slightly and, yes, waiting for something—subconsciously expecting the repetition of that sharp, unusual noise.

It came—from outside of the French window of her bedroom, a window to which a small balcony was attached. This balcony was intended largely for decoration. Incidentally, one or two persons could stand on it and drink in the view of the opposite wall of the Gothic building—a wall divided from the observers by a small square court. Certainly the balcony was not designed as an entrance to the building—being four stories from the ground. Yet it was as an entrance that this particular balcony was being used now. Even as she stared, her heart dropping a beat and then pounding wildly, she saw a figure outlined there. The next instant it had moved through the open window into her room. Its motions now were noiseless. What had awakened her must have been the intruder's unexpected descent upon some flower pots lined with red geraniums and condoning left on the balcony railing by the caretaker.

Miss Desmond recovered her breath. So she had a burglar to deal with! She had often wondered what she would do in such a contingency. She did not wonder now. Her heart had resumed more normal functioning, though it was still working too fast for comfort, and her brain acted with gratifying clearness. The wise move was to frighten the burglar away. A scream might do that—a loud and far-reaching scream. But she did not scream. For one reason, she was not quite sure that she could produce a really satisfying sound, and for another she had no wish to bring in the neighbors and the police and to figure in court as the newspaper the next morning. No! If she could get rid of the man without screaming it would be much better. A light might do it—a sudden, brilliant light. She raised her hand to the head of her bed and switched on her reading light.

The result was not all that she had hoped. The reading light came from one bulb, softened by an amber shade. It merely cast a gentle glow over her as she now sat up in bed, staring at the intruder, and it still left the remainder of the room in semi-darkness. However, it evidently startled the visitor. He reached her in three strides and spoke in a sharp whisper.

"Put that out," he commanded, and she could tell by his voice that he was out of breath, as if he had been running or climbing fast.

As she did not obey, he leaned forward over her and pressed the tiny knob under the bulb. The objects in the room, which had stood forth for an instant as if coming to the defense of their mistress, again retreated into their shadows. But in that brief interval Allen had seen the intruder. He was a tall, young man, smooth-faced, dark-eyed, and in evening dress. He wore a soft hat which he had pulled down to his eyebrows. And as he bent over her she caught the odor of tobacco smoke, definite, not yet stale enough to be unpleasant.

Allen's lips curled. So there really was this familiar type in life as well as on the stage—the "Gentleman Jim" brand of authors. Her heart was still beating too fast, but her brain was no longer afraid of him.

He had immediately moved away from the bed, and he now stood near the window he had entered, still breathing hard and hesitating as if not knowing quite what to do next. Possibly she had frightened him, after all. Possibly he meant to leave as he had come. But even as the faint hope was born in her it perished. He had no intention of leaving. He was simply keeping quiet, and listening intently. His back was now toward her, she could see that much, and he appeared to be expecting some sound from the court. She spoke impulsively.

"Take what you want and go."

He wheeled at that, but still remained where he was, though she knew he was looking in her direction. Her heart beats quickened again. The knowledge of those unseen eyes, peering at her through the darkness, was almost more than she could endure. Then she heard an unexpected sound. Was it—could it be—a slight laugh? She had no time to decide, for he answered her at once and as quietly as she had spoken.

"Unfortunately, it's not quite as simple as that," he said.

There was something amazingly reassuring about his voice. It was not only the voice of an educated man, but it was an unusually agreeable voice, deep, rich, and really musical. Allen subconsciously took in these facts and the comfort of them before she spoke again.

"What do you mean?"

"Why, simply that I can't leave just now. I know I'm frightening you," he added apologetically—"and I'm most awfully sorry. I assure you I'm not a burglar and that you have absolutely nothing to fear. But the cold truth is, I've simply got to stay here for a little while."

"You've got to stay here?" Allen Desmond was a sophisticated young person who had had some unusual experiences in her twenty-four years of life, but her pulse deserted her now. She repeated the young man's extraneous remarks in stammering amazement shot through with a rising excitement.

"Yes, I hope you don't mind."

The intruder was obviously ill at ease. He remained where he was, and his tone was increasingly apologetic.

"But I do mind. I mind very much."

"I'm most awfully sorry," the young man repeated, and his voice sounded as if he meant it.

"And I insist that you go away at once," the unwilling hostess ended urgently.

The young man sighed. She could hear him do it.

"It's most annoying, bursting in on you like this," he admitted.

"You say I thought this apartment was empty this summer?"

Allen thought she understood.

"Have you been coming here nights?" she guessed.

"Using this apartment as a—hiding place?"

"Good heavens, no!"

The visitor repudiated the suggestion in a shocked tone. "I've never been here before," he ended with more firmness, "and I promise you right now that I'll never come again."

"But what are you doing here now, and why don't you get out when I tell you to?"

Allen asked the question in a voice that was almost a wail. As he took it in silence, she ended desperately.

"All right. Then I'll have to scream."

As if the words had touched a spring in him, the young man sprang forward again.

"Don't do that!" he cried imperatively, with a sharp change of voice. "Don't dare do that!"

As if the sound of his own words had startled him, he caught himself up.

"Really, I couldn't think of letting you do that," he added, more quietly but firmly.

Allen, who was still sitting up in bed, settled back against her pillow and stared at him with an increased sensation of bewildered helplessness. Her eyes were becoming accustomed to the dimness of the room. She could now clearly see the outline of the figure towering above her, the gleam of its white shirt front, the oval of the smooth shaven face under the down drawn hat. This was the most amazing experience. Possibly it was merely one of those had dreams in which one is half awake and conscious where one is not.

"If I scream, how could you stop me?" she demanded, and was pleased to observe that he hesitated again, as if she had asked him a poser. But his hesitation was only momentary.

"With this," he said simply, and picked up her catapillars. She was appalled.

"You wouldn't dare?" she quavered.

"O, yes, I would. I'd dare almost anything rather than leave this room for a few minutes. I'm sorry I'm inconveniencing you, but I can't let your nervousness upset my plans. You may as well understand that at once. Come now, let's have a showdown," he suggested in a more friendly tone. "I've told you I'm not a burglar and that you're not in the least danger. I've also told you I've got to stay here for a while. Why not make the best of it?"

"How long have you got to stay here?"

Allen displayed herself for the slight quiver in her voice, but the situation was getting on her nerves. He responded in a different, more gently, even kindly.

"I don't know. Perhaps ten minutes—perhaps half an hour—perhaps even longer."

"Couldn't you go into another room and wait?"

He hesitated.

"I wish I could. I'd prefer that myself—but how do I know what you'd do when I turned my back? No, I'd better keep you under my eye."

"Suppose I gave you my word that I wouldn't raise any alarm?" The suggestion was on the tip of Allen's tongue. Her lips were parted to utter it, but they slowly closed. Could she endure the thought of this man sitting just outside of her room or wandering through her apartment? She knew she could not. Better, much better, follow his plan with her and keep him under her eye. She asked another question.

"Do you expect to go down to the street the way you came up?"

"I suppose I'll have to." Plainly the prospect did not appeal to the visitor, for his tone was dry.

"Why don't you leave quietly now, through my front door, walk down the three flights of stairs, and go out properly through the main entrance? The night man will think you have been having a late supper with some one in the building—say Mr. Cullen on the floor above me. His friends come and go at all hours."

She saw him turn and walk slowly toward the window, evidently considering the suggestion.

Then he shook his head.

"Too much risk," he decided aloud. "The night man might decide to investigate. One can never tell when those fellows will get officious. Besides, there's a policeman loitering just outside the entrance, who might recognize me."

"The girl's exclamation was involuntary. 'Then you are a law breaker—' whether you're a burglar or not." She stated rather than asked.

"I suppose you might put it that way." His tone was dry again. Plainly the interview was getting on his nerves, as it had already got on hers. He moved restlessly about in the limited space of the small bedroom.

"Couldn't you wait on the balcony?"

At that he turned and looked at her.

"My dear woman," he said impatiently, "haven't I told you there's a policeman lurking below?" She saw him thrust his hands into the side pockets of his light evening coat he wore, and she fancied she could see his annoyed expression through the darkness. Certainly she could imagine it.

"Don't call me your dear woman!" she flashed.

"I won't. But I will admit that you've got a lot of pluck." She caught the gleam of his white teeth, heard him chuckle again, evidently in restored good humor. "Most women would be raising the devil by this time," he cheerfully admitted.

His impertinence, as she interpreted it, added the final touch to her combined fear and anger.

"You're intolerable!" she hastily exclaimed.

"I beg your pardon! I was forgetting myself." He spoke so contritely that to her surprise her anger cooled. "I know just how bad all this seems to you. I force myself into your room and frighten you half to death—" whether or not it was her duty to notify the police of what had happened. But though she had many friends, few of them were back in town so early in the autumn season, and though she summoned these before her in mental review she found no one among them she felt justified in calling up at such an hour for such a service. The thought of telephoning to the police was even more unpleasant.

At last her common sense reassured itself. The experience had been unpleasant but it was over. It could not be repeated. She was as safe here in her locked apartment as she would be anywhere. She would get through the night as calmly as she could, and the next morning she would take the first train to her country home, where her mother would give her better advice as to her future course than any one else could offer. Having reached this proper decision, Miss Desmond turned out the reading light, sternly ignoring a strong inner disinclination to do so. She then resolutely composed herself for slumber and, to her amazement when she subsequently realized the fact, fell asleep almost at once.

When she awoke a brilliant sun was vainly trying to force its beams through the chintz window curtains and the unventilated room was warm and close and subtly suggestive of tobacco smoke. The visitor, she knew, had not smoked, but he must have been smoking just before he entered her room. She remembered that the odor of tobacco had hung around him. She sprang out of bed, opened the French doors and threw them wide, parted the curtains slightly to let in the fresh air, and hurrying into her bathroom set the cold water running into the tub.

She always awoke like a giant refreshed, meeting a jocular morning with a spirit as buoyant and remaining undashed even by gloomy weather. This, obviously, was a day after her own heart, and as she splashed in the cold bath she again inclined to the belief that the night's experience had been simply an unpleasant dream.

As she dressed, however, her mood sobered. She had taken another look at the broken flower pot and the torn and tortured ivy. An impulse she hardly understood made her find a pair of scissors and cut off the ragged ends of ivy near her balcony. Also she swept up the pieces of the broken flower pot with the fresh earth that had spilled from it and wrapping these with the ivy hid them all in the corner of the linen closet under an impressive heap of winter blankets and quilts. Then, looking as charming as usual, and feeling almost as well as she looked, she entered the elevator to go down to the first floor dining room for breakfast. She had had an adventure—a real one. It would be rather good fun to tell her friends about it later on.

It was barely eight o'clock, but Kelly, the day operator, came on duty at seven and, as usual, he had lightened the toll of his first hour of service by a careful perusal of a morning newspaper. He liked Miss Desmond, who was always generous in the matter of tips, and he greeted her this morning with the added expansiveness of one who has news to impart.

"That's the kinda neighborhood we got!" he untidily announced, and held up the first page of his newspaper. The black type of a scare head met the girl's eyes.

JAMES F. CROSBY MURDERED IN HIS HOME.

Allen turned away with a shudder of distaste.

"I never read accounts of murders," she told Kelly. Kelly was disappointed but not surprised. Some women were like that.

"But Mr. Crosby lived right across the street," he explained. "You must of saw him often."

"O, was it that Crosby?" Allen was appalled. She knew of "that Crosby" only as a rich, idle, hugely dissipated young man with a reputation which kept him girls from time he wanted to, an "croak you, an' walk out again, an' go about his other business. The newspapers prints a lot of crows that don't mean nothin'." Kelly ended disgustedly.

"What d'ye know about that?"

His question was purely oratorical, for

Kelly was sure Miss Desmond knew nothing whatever about it. Miss Desmond herself was not so sure. An icy chill was wiggling down her spine.

"You say the butler found Mr. Crosby dead at one o'clock this morning?" she asked, forcing the words through lips that felt stiff.

"Yes'm. He'd only been dead five or ten minutes. He was kinda warm. The butler musta heard the shot. Anyway, he heard somethin'—and he listened awhile and then finally he went downstairs—"

The listener ruthlessly interrupted the freshest of words.

"Will you lend me your newspaper for a few minutes? I don't suppose I could get one in the dining room."

"Sure!" Kelly willingly handed it over. He was getting a rise out of Miss Desmond now, all right, all right. He guessed she didn't like the idea of murderers rumm'ing loose in this neighborhood any more than he did.

"You was alone last night, too," he added, as a final thrilling touch, when he opened the door to let her out. That got her. He distinctly saw her shiver.

Allen went on into the dining room, and sitting down at a small table in a retired corner ordered a pot of coffee and some hot milk. She was not sure she could swallow it but she had to order something and the coffee would be good for her if she could get it down. While she waited she read the newspaper, holding it before her with surprisingly steady hands.

Of course, the article was short. It was little beyond what Kelly had told her. The rest of the first page was given up to the hectic life story of young Crosby—a story which was not pleasant reading and which almost recoiled a reader to the young man's violent passing.

Some emphasis was laid on the detail that the young man seemed to have been alone on the night of the murder. As a rule, solitude was a condition he had carefully avoided. Late parties were his specialty—supper parties and card parties. That night he had come home alone just after midnight, and abruptly ordering the servants to bed had retired to his study to smoke and look over his accumulated mail. His valet had left him with the conviction that his master expected a late visitor or late visitors—who he himself would admit or who had latch keys to the house, which Crosby had given to some of his intimates. That sort of thing often happened.

But no servant had heard any visitor come, and which was not surprising, as all of them had promptly and relievedly retired to their distant upstairs quarters. If the murderer had used a noiseless pistol, the murder would not have been discovered till morning. As it was, the butler heard the shot only by chance as he was passing through the upper hall. At first he had thought it merely a popping cork—a familiar sound in this house at those hours. He had even gone on to his room before he decided to come down and investigate.

When the police arrived there was only one suggestion that a visitor had been admitted. The two cigar stubs found in the ash tray by the dead man's easy chair were the stubs of two different brands of cigars—one of them not the kind of cigar Crosby smoked himself or had on hand to offer guests. However, it was a good cigar, and of so well known a brand that it offered little help to the police. Thousands of men in the crowded city must have smoked the same kind of a cigar last night. Also, of course, some one might have given it to Crosby during the day and he might have smoked it that night because it had been in his cigar case.

Miss Desmond's delicate nostrils quivered. Suddenly and almost as definitely as if it were in the room the odor of cigar smoke returned—the faint odor which had hung almost imperceptibly over her room during the intruder's visit and which she had again detected that morning after the room's unventilated night.

Her coffee came to her and she drank it. Then she returned to her apartment, restoring Kelly's newspaper with a word of thanks as she entered the elevator and discouraging with considerable tact the youth's obvious desire to discuss further the details of the murder. At the threshold of her bedroom she hesitated, shuddering. She felt she could not enter it, would never sleep in it again. But she forced herself to go in, to repack hurriedly the small handbag she had brought to town, and to write a note to the caretaker, whose leisurely habit it was, according to Kelly, to drop around "about nine in the morning. Then she summoned her taxicab, caught her train, and within an hour was in her mother's arms.

Ordinarily Mrs. Desmond would have been touched by the unusual fervor with which her only child clung to her after so brief a separation, but today she appeared to see nothing odd about it. She was too frankly relieved by Allen's return and too concerned with a new anxiety of her own to be especially observant. For a long moment her face, oddly like her daughter's and up till recently surprisingly young and fresh, rested wearily against Allen's.

"I'm so glad you're back, dear," she said heavily. "I've had an awful night—with the same pain that's bothered me so much lately. I've decided to follow your advice and have Doctor Chapin look me over. I meant to wait till afternoon, but I think he's in his office now—and since I've made up my mind I'd like to have him over. Suppose you telephone and make an appointment."

Allen telephoned, with a sinking heart. She had been worried about her mother for weeks, but Mrs. Desmond had robustly and steadily attributed her frequent attacks of pain to neuralgia. This morning the girl was shocked by her appearance. Her mother looked actually gray.

Doctor Chapin made an immediate appointment, and he showed further consideration by not keeping his patient waiting when she reached his office, though every chair in the waiting room was occupied. Mrs. Desmond went into his private consulting rooms with her handsome head held high and a little spot of color on each cheek. Allen knew those signs. It was thus that Honore Desmond had always met the crises in her life. With just that look, and just that poise of her head, she had taken the news of her husband's death in an automobile accident. It was with just that expression, that poise of head, that she had slowly risen from her knees after closing in death the eyes of her only son five years before. Watching her mother now, Allen knew, for the first time, what Mrs. Desmond expected to be told—and turning her eyes from her mother to the face of the old doctor, as the examination progressed, she also realized he was about to tell it.

He made it as easy as he could. An immediate operation of course—the next day, if possible. Dr. Chapin would make all the necessary arrangements at once. And there was hope—yes, yes, beyond question there was hope. Out in the waiting room, for example, there was at this moment a charming woman who had gone through the same thing two years ago and who was now getting on very well, but still dropped in twice a year for observation. Mrs. Desmond's temperament was also immensely in her favor. She had such pluck, such resiliency.

Honore Desmond checked the optimistic outpouring with a smile, and rose.

"Of course, there's hope," she said cheerfully. "We'll motor into the hospital this afternoon, when we hear you have made all the arrangements, and I'll like the operation tomorrow morning, please—as early as possible."

To Allen she said on the way home, "We're going to have a busy day, my darling. We must telephone Mr. Rawling to come out from town at once. I expect to live, but I'm going to put my 'house in order' just the same—and to leave nothing to chance. Thank God that though you may be alone in the world you won't have any financial worries. Life will give you all that money can buy, anyway."

"All that money can buy!"

Allen repeated the words to herself six months later, as she sat alone in a compartment of a night express traveling from Cologne to Ostend. She had a horror of foreign sleeping cars, and she never traveled at night if she could help it. But she was hastening to Ostend in response to the sudden summons of her closest friend, Harriet West, who had unexpectedly arrived there with her father, who had been summoned to Ostend on professional business. The Wests would be there only one more day, and Harriet had telegraphed Allen—who had recently left them in London—to meet her and go back to London with her. From London the three were going to Plymouth to take the next Saturday's ship, on which it had been agreed that they would sail for home together.

The prospect of Harriet's companionship was exhilarating. Allen, who had come to Germany on a side visit to a former schoolmate, had not expected to see her friends again till they met on the steamer. She felt a lightness of heart she had rarely experienced in the long last years following her mother's death—months in which she had passed through the chill and desolate loneliness known only to those who have not a blood tie left in the world. Money? Yes, as her mother had promised she had plenty of that. But each day was teaching her how little money can really buy. Friends! Yes, plenty of them. But friends were all more or less absorbed in their own families—more or less bound by family obligations. Allen had not known there could be such loneliness as that she had experienced since her mother left her. However, she had kept her independence and freedom of action, had definitely refused hired companions and the position of paying guest in the homes of others. Loneliness was to be preferred to the wrong sort of companionship. Which sage reflection was even now sharply emphasized by the discovery that the train had stopped at a station, that the door of her compartment was opening, and that an undesired companion was joining her.

Allen frowned. One of the things money could buy was supposed to be privacy. She had reserved this compartment—she had tipped the guard most lavishly on the distinct understanding that she was to remain in it undisturbed. Also, the compartment itself was plainly labeled as for ladies only. Yet here was a man coming in, bag and baggage—the latter borne by the puffing and overladen guard who, under cover of his burden, directed appealing glances of apology at Allen.

"This will do nicely, thank you."

At the crisp words the girl started as if a spring in her had been touched. The next words were addressed directly to her.

"I'm sorry to disturb you—the tone was cold and formal—but the train is crowded and there was no other place." There was a familiar and disconcerting flash of white teeth. In the next instant a startled word in a wholly different tone.

"You!" the newcomer jerked out, and he added slowly, "By Jove!"

History, Allen fully reflected, was repeating itself. He had been started, and exclaimed, "By Jove," in leaving her. He was startled on seeing her again, as well he might be, and again he was calling on Jove. But this exclamation seemed one of pure amazement. There was no fear in it. He had the poise, the sang froid of the typical criminal. Even as she stared at him, incredulously and with widening cheeks, he went on with an air of easy assurance.

"But I beg your pardon, I shouldn't have spoken. Naturally you may not care to renew our—may I say acquaintance?"

Yes, he was smiling—there was no doubt of that. And the smile swept Allen back over six months of time, and into the dark bedroom she had never slept in since that night. For a moment the nightmare of that hour repeated itself. Then her nerves steadied. She was no longer the girl of that occasion. She was a woman, steadied by life and death and suffering. In her devotion to her dying mother she had almost forgotten this creature of the underworld who for an hour had terrorized her. He could no longer terrify her and she knew it. The blood returned to her face. Subconsciously she took in the odd similarity in the setting of their two encounters. The hour was—must be—about the same. She herself was in a corner of the compartment, near a window, and directly under a reading light. She had an open book in her hand over which she had stared speechlessly at the newcomer.

In the brightness of the light thrown down upon her he now saw her head rise and two spots of color come to her cheeks. Honore Desmond's daughter had come into her inheritance of courage.

The newcomer sat down in silence. The guard had closed the door of the compartment and departed. The two passengers were locked in together until the train reached the next station.

"It seems to be my fate to frighten you to death," the stranger murmured discontentedly. "But I can't see quite why you were in such a panic over now. If there was any way to get out, short of jumping

He leaned forward over her and pressed the tiny knob under the bulb.

He Leaned Forward Over Her and Pressed the Tiny Knob Under the Bulb.

"You don't frighten me!"

"Don't I?" He seemed surprised and again a little amused. There was a faint suggestion of his now familiar chuckle. "At least I'm glad of that," he ended, politely.

"But I simply loathe having you here. Do you understand that?"

"I certainly do, and I loathe being here. It's very annoying for both of us."

"Annoying!"

He took that in a silence which deepened till it lay between them like a substance. He had retired to the room's remotest end, near the window, and was resting a shoulder negligently against the wall. But she knew his caution and watchfulness were unchanged.

At last Allen, her nerves now at the snapping point, could endure the strain no longer. Abruptly she again switched on the night light, and as she started forward she spoke.

"If you move another step," she said quickly, "I'll scream. Smother me if you want to. I can't endure this another instant—"

But he had started back, staring at her through the room's soft light.

"By Jove!" he gasped. "You're a young girl!"

Her reply sounded odd to her own ears—very faint, very far away.

"What—did—you—think—I—was?" Her head was swirling, and he and the room seemed whirling with it.

"Why—I—naturally, I thought you were an older woman—here, I'll clear out. I'm going! For God's sake don't faint!"

She saw him take two strides to the balcony, was vaguely conscious that he swung over it, that he dropped.

When she recovered consciousness the night light was still glowing above her. She stared, wide-eyed, at the spot where the intruder had stood. He was gone—or had he been there at all? The whole experience seemed more than ever like a bad dream. Probably it had been a bad dream. Yet, if she had dreamed, why was the reading light burning and why—slowly and shiveringly she got out of bed to investigate—yes, why was one of the flower pots on the balcony broken? And why was that thick ivy on the wall at the right of the balcony torn away and hanging in tattered festoons?

No, it had not been a dream. She closed the French window, locked it securely, and drew closely together across it the wide chintz window curtains. She forced herself to make an inspection of the entire apartment. Every window was shut and fastened, every door was locked or bolted. Everything, in short, was normal. As if in further emphasis of the normality of the atmosphere, the passenger elevator had stopped, seemingly on the floor below, and she heard the bang of its opening and closing door. The brick tower in the center hall of the apartment struck two. It had struck one when she was aroused. How long had the intruder been there? How long had she been unconscious?

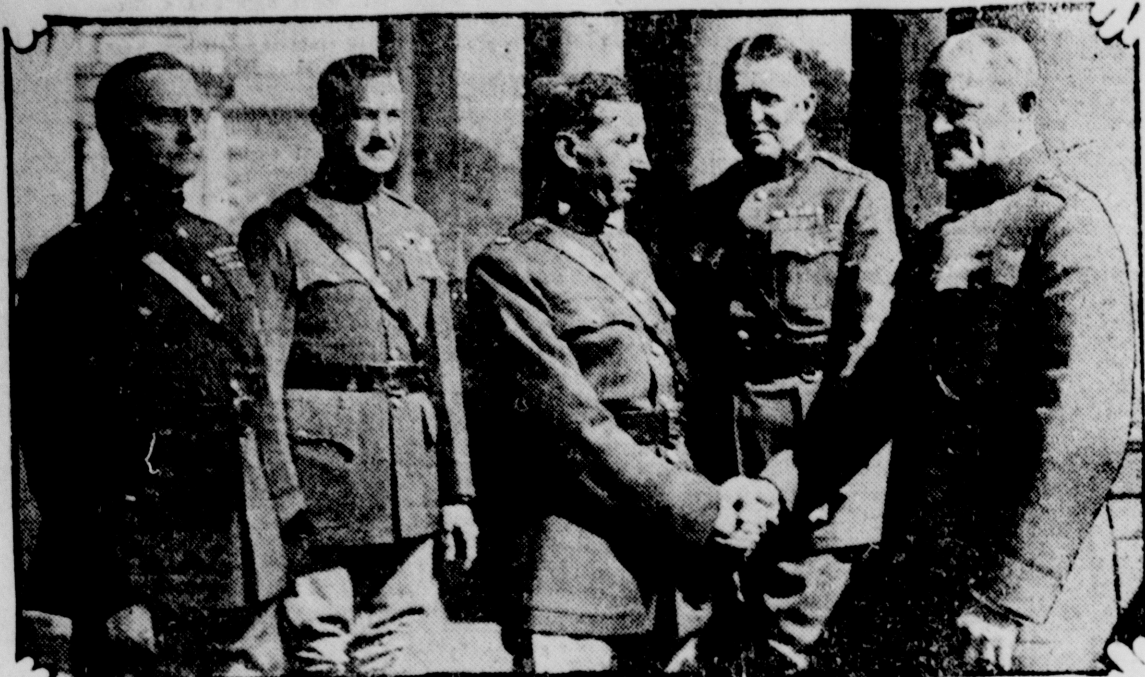

She went back to her room, and returned to bed. It was a September night, but she was still shivering. She drew the bedclothing close to her chin, clenched her teeth tightly to keep them from chattering, and resolutely summoned all her will power to help her to go to sleep. Her first impulse had been to telephone to some friend to come to her for the rest of the night—some older woman who would also advise her as

Gen. Pershing Says Goodbye

Captured Lake Charles Alligator

"Pete" had things pretty much his own way for 20 years. Farmers along Lake Prie, in southwestern Louisiana, would see him sneak up and kill off their pigs. But the big 625-pound alligator always succeeded in eluding them on the way back to his lair. The other day, though, he grew curious when he heard a lot of noise around. And that was his undoing. When he shot his head up through the sand, a lasso tightened around his jaws. Now "Pete's" making all the fairs down south.

800 Were Drowned Here

Eight hundred boy students were drowned when the floods that swept Hunan, China, struck this boarding school. More than 10,000 residents of the city met death.

Extra! Boston Flooded!

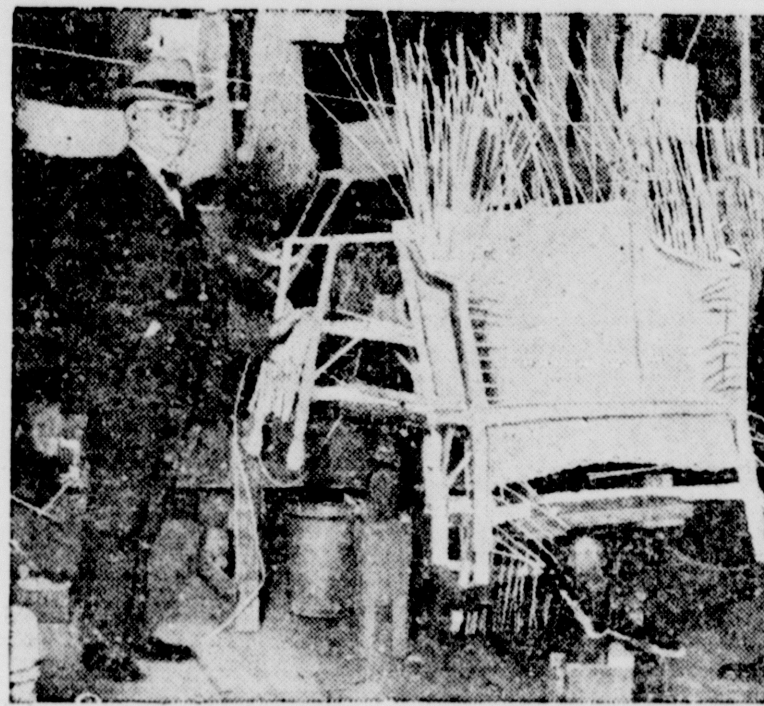

Rainfall in Boston the other day was so heavy, that water accumulated in the yards outside South Station. This looks like a sea-going train.

Dad's Suit

Frank Snyder, son of the catcher of the New York Giants, is all dressed up to go to the world series wearing a suit his father wore in the series of 1921. Naturally a few alterations were necessary to bring it down to the size Frank wears.

Where Leopold Studies Now

Nathan F. Leopold Jr. and Richard A. Loeb, "super-intellectuals," are back at their studies again—but not in university classrooms and law libraries. This is the kind of a classroom they have now. They are learning trades. Here is the chair factory at Joliet penitentiary. Leopold is working there. Loeb has been assigned to a different sort of work. They were separated soon after their arrival at the prison.

Now Children--

And now we introduce the youngest substitute school principal in the United States—Miss Lillian M. Hart, 19, of New York City. Miss Hart is a rowing enthusiast having won local championships.

A Narrow Escape

A section of an oil tanker was hoisted through the air for several hundred feet in the fire that destroyed the painted Great Lakes steamer South American at Holland, Mich. It went through a house at Montella Park. "Buddy" Morrill, 6, entered the building just as the tank crashed through, but he escaped injury.

And There Is Plenty Room for More

A minute isn't very much, but it's big enough this time to comfortably hold 12 beautiful girls—and leave plenty of room for more. It's the minute hand of what will be the world's largest clock. It will be operated by a company in Jersey City and will be visible from New York City. When this hand is doing its stuff, it will travel 157 feet every 60 minutes. It weighs 2200 pounds.

Ever See a White Robin?

White robins are few and far between. Only about one out of every 10,000 robins turns out to be this color, say ornithologists. And here is one. Lillian Jones of Circleville, O., has sent it to the Cincinnati Zoological Gardens.

through the window," he went on, "I'd take it."

Alleen found words.

"Please don't speak to me!" she said quietly.

The stranger flushed.

"Certainly not," he agreed, "if that's the way you want it."

He took off his traveling cap and overcoat, hung them up, opened a small bag, found a book in it, and establishing himself in the opposite corner, away from her, prepared to read. Alleen looked at her wrist watch. To her dismay it was not running. She had forgotten to wind it in the excitement of starting on this all night journey. The stranger took out his watch and glanced at it.

"One o'clock," he said pleasantly, and he added, with an irrepressible smile—"our favorite hour for a tête-à-tête!"

Alleen lowered her book, and looked at him. She had decided what to do. At the next station she would turn him over to the authorities; even though to do so meant delay and publicity from which her soul shrank.

"I'm shut up here with you," she said coldly, "and short of stopping the train and raising a general alarm I can't get rid of you. But if you continue to annoy me in the meantime, I shall certainly ring for the guard."

At her first words the blood had again rushed to his dark, good looking face, but his eyes met hers calmly and without resentment.

"I know I gave you a horrible fright that night," he said gently. "I've been wishing ever since I could meet you again and explain."

He stopped, as her hand rose toward the bell, and with an almost imperceptible shrug he picked up the book he had put down and settled himself more comfortably in his corner.

Alleen also kept her eyes upon the printed page before her, but she did not turn it. Her brain was working busily. She was sure that in such an emergency Harriet West would come to her assistance, bringing her father. Mr. West was a lawyer and a famous one. He would know what to do in this crisis and how to protect Alleen, his client, from any save absolutely necessary participation in the horrible affair. She wished now she had discussed the matter with her mother but, of course, her plan to do so had been upset, almost wholly lost sight of during the strain of the operation and the subsequent hopeless fight for life. Even on Mrs. Desmond's "good days," of which she had so few, the subject was obviously not one to be discussed. It would have excited and alarmed her.

Alleen herself had deliberately taught her memory to keep away from the incident. She had read no more newspaper accounts of the Crosby murder. She had not followed the trial or discussed the killing with any one. To drop the slightest hint of that midnight visit to her room might mean she would be drawn into the hideous mess—to the distress and probable injury of her mother.

But now her mother had gone. Now no one but herself and this criminal would suffer if she performed the duty that came so clearly before her. As she thus reflected, deep in her subconscious soul, she was aware of an instinct that refused to accept as a criminal this quiet, handsome young man, with his look of race and breeding. Suddenly he rose, and she started violently. He threw down with a hopeless gesture the book he still held in his hand.

"I'm only going to put on my overcoat," he patiently explained. "It's getting chilly."

As he slipped into the heavy garment he looked at her curiously, reading aright the expression on her eyes.

"By Jove," he exclaimed again, "you have an actual horror of me, haven't you?" He stood staring at her, as if dazed by the shock of this discovery, the overcoat still half on and half off.

"You act as if I were a criminal," he added slowly. Abruptly, as once before, the nerve tension the girl was under snapped.

"What else are you?" she demanded, and then stopped, startled by the sound of her own words.

He drew on the coat, buttoned it, sat down again, and looked at her.

"So that's it," he said thoughtfully. "You still think I'm a murderer. I knew at the time you might, as it was the night of the Crosby affair that I dropped in. But surely you've read the newspapers since then. You know that the woman who murdered Crosby has just confessed, don't you?"

Alleen did not reply. She merely looked at him, uncertainly, wondering whether to accept or reject this story. He took her silence as permission to continue.

"I suppose being over here you didn't read about it—though both the English and French newspapers had reports of the trial this month. Crosby had cut quite a swath in Europe, too, it seems, and a lot of Europeans knew him—"

He had gone on talking to give her time to think. Now she broke in suddenly.

"Is it true—what you have just said?"

"I assure you it is," he said quietly, "but you needn't take my word. When you get to Ostend, you can go over the newspaper files and find the printed reports. It was the old story with Crosby. The woman—she was merely a girl and she had been a nice girl—had been abominably treated by him. She was half crazy for the still loved him. She went to his house that night by appointment, carrying a revolver with her. They had a quarrel and she shot him. She hid for a few months and she could have got away entirely but she suddenly decided to give herself up. It seems she had hardly eaten or slept since the murder. The jury acquitted her. I'm happy to say."

"Then what were you—" Alleen brought out the words with an effort. Her dominant feeling was incredulity, shot through with an amazing sense of relief.

"What was I doing in your room? That's what I've wanted to explain to you ever since that night. May I do it now?"

"Yes," she said simply. Of course, all this might be a lie, but she would at least hear his story. Perhaps after all—

He leaned forward.

"This is between us," he began. "It must always be between us. No one else knows it or will ever know it so far as I'm concerned but—I saw the shooting!"

"You saw it?"

He nodded.

"I was there. Crosby and I were classmates at college. I despised him then and I've despised him ever since, and I had nothing to do with him. In fact, we only met twice since we left New Haven. But the day of the murder he telephoned for me, on one of his sudden impulses. I'm a lawyer and he had quarreled with his last batch of lawyers. He was always quarreling with the people associated with him and I calling on a new set," the speaker interposed. "So he happened to think of me. He wanted me to come that evening and fix up some sort of financial settlement for the girl and her child. He was willing to do that on condition that she agreed to let him alone henceforth."

He stopped and waited an instant, but Alleen did not speak.

"I didn't care for the job," he went on then, "and I told him so and explained I had an important dinner and theater engagement that night—a semi-business affair with some out of town clients. He said I could come late, so I agreed. We had supper after the play and I didn't get to Crosby's house till after twelve. The girl wasn't there yet, so we smoked and waited till she came. When she finally arrived Crosby was high handed and brutal, as usual, and the girl lost her head over something he said. Any girl would. It made me want to knock him down."

He looked at her apologetically.

"I'll make it as short as I can. She shot him through the heart and he was dead when he struck the floor. Neither of us touched him. She gave me one look, dropped the pistol in a pocket of the coat she wore, and slipped out of the house like a shadow. I followed her as far as the sidewalk, and then we separated. Neither of us had spoken a word. There was no one in sight and she got away safely. I crossed the street and saw a policeman coming around the corner. He was at such an angle that he could have seen me coming down the steps of Crosby's house. I didn't know whether he had or not. I don't know yet, but I don't think he had. Anyhow, I didn't dare to walk into our front entrance under his eyes."

Alleen interrupted him for the first time.

"You mean that you lived there—in our building?"

"Yes, in the fourth floor apartment right next to yours. I moved in in May, just after you and your mother left for the country."

"But why did you—"

"That's what I'm telling you. I walked around the corner, doubled back behind the Belvedere on the side street, and got into our court. My plan was to slip up the wall near the balconies and get into my apartment through the window of my bedroom, which is always open. I had done it last June on a wager, after an alumnae dinner, so I knew it was practicable. But when I got up my window was closed and locked for the only time that summer! That's what they call the irony of fate. Your window was open. I knew your apartment was empty, so I planned in. You see, I hadn't much time to think. When I found some one in the room I thought at first it was the caretaker, and after you spoke, I decided it was your mother, in town for the night. I had caught a glimpse of the officer just as I crawled over the balcony. He was on the street below, looking around, but not upward. I thought he had not seen me, but of course I couldn't be sure."

"But why—the girl had got away."

"Don't you see? I was the only witness of the murder. If I was recognized and held as a witness I'd have to tell the whole story. My sympathies were all with the girl and I wanted to save her if I could. To do it I had to keep out of the way. Crosby's valet knew the girl and I was coming, but I didn't think he'd mention it. He was a decent chap. Probably he was playing a waiting game as I was. I was simply giving the girl her chance. I had no idea of dying in the chair for her or any nonsense of that sort, and if I had been dragged into the dirty mess I'd have told the truth. But I wanted to keep out of it. Luck was with me, as it happened. I had engaged my passage for Europe the following day. I didn't go on that ship, but I sailed on another and lay low, even over here, till the girl gave herself up. Since then I've been getting ready to go home, and I'm sailing for New York on the Oceania next Saturday."

"Are you really? So am I."

Alleen's tone was so warm and friendly that he smiled.

"That's nice, isn't it?" he said. "Perhaps I can make myself useful. I've got a lot to make up to you. I can't tell you how I worried over you—"

"Over me?"

"Yes, over the after effect of such a shock to a girl. Then—his voice dropped and his eyes ran over her somberly—"I read of your mother's death and that it had left you alone. You see, I read the newspapers carefully."

One point still puzzled Alleen.

"But why didn't you slip out of my apartment that night and into your own? You had a latch key, didn't you?"

"Of course I did, and my first plan was to go home. As I said, I hadn't much time to think. But when I saw the policeman I was afraid to move. I knew that any minute some one might come rushing out of Crosby's house with the news, and if the valet happened to mention who Crosby expected it wouldn't take the police five minutes to be battering at my door. So I stayed exactly where I was—as you have reason to know—and when I left I went straight to Hoboken and got on a ship that sailed in the morning. Fortunately I had plenty of money on me, as I had expected to sail the next day anyway. Of course, I was taking a big chance, for I might have been arrested as accessory to the crime," he ended cheerfully.

"Did you know the girl?"

"Never saw her before or since that night," said the young man. "But she's the right sort. She was mighty careful not to drag my name into the case when she gave herself up. There was a hint during the trial that the valet had cherished a hopeless passion for her. Probably that's why he kept his mouth shut. But I'm forgetting my credentials."

He put his hand in his pocket and taking out his card case, handed her a bit of paste-board.

MR. JULIAN AVERY

THE METROPOLITAN CLUB.

Alleen looked up, her eyes glowing.

"Jack's chum?" she breathed.

"Yes. Your brother and I were roommates at New Haven. You were in Europe during most of our vacations, and when he died I was in the hospital with appendicitis. So you and I never met. But I had met your mother."

"She admired you so much. She said you were wonderful to her when you came to see her after you got out of the hospital."

Alleen's hands went out to him. "And you were wonderful about that poor girl, too—giving up six months of your life for her."

Julian Avery was a young man who recognized an opportunity when it came his way. He held the hands tightly.

"I want to give up all the rest of my life to you," he whispered. "I haven't thought of anything but you since that night."

"No," she agreed. "But I mustn't frighten you again by telling you so too soon, must I?" he added, contritely.

Alleen's eyes met his with a smile in them.

"No," she agreed. "You mustn't tell me too soon."

Lieut. Eugene Eubank Weds In Honolulu

Of especial interest to a host of Port Arthur friends is the following announcement, taken from the Honolulu Star-Bulletin of Saturday, September 13:

Miss Helen Kelly, only daughter of Col. and Mrs. William Kelly, Jr., of the United States army, and granddaughter of former Governor and Mrs. B. B. Odell of New York, was very quietly married in her parents' home, 615 Wyllie avenue, on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock, to Lieut. Eugene L. Eubank of the air service, Luke Field, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Eubank of Port Arthur, Texas. The only witnesses were Mrs. Kelly, the bride's mother, Colonel Kelly, who gave his daughter in marriage, and Lieut. O. N. Stephens, the groom's best man. Chaplain Cornelius Maher of Fort Kamehameha performed the ceremony.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride party motored to the Oahu Country club, where a reception was held at which the bride and groom received the congratulations and best wishes of more than 20 of their friends.

The bride wore a lovely gown of white crepe satin, the train, the panel down the front and the graceful trains which fell from the shoulders to the floor were made of rare old point lace, which had been used on the wedding gown of her grandmother, Mrs. B. B. Odell, and by the bride's mother at the time of her wedding. The bride's veil was of lace and was caught in a plain head-dress of pearls in Russian effect, the veil being so arranged that it fell into the long, graceful lines over the old rose point lace train.

Mrs. Eubank's mother was gowned in an embroidered cream net over pale pink satin.

The country club was decorated in palms, ferns, white lilies and white asters, a green and white color scheme which was most effective, and which was a pleasing background when the bride party received their guests.

Mrs. Eubank is a graduate of Baldwin school, Bryn Mawr, the class of 1919, and has been one of the most popular girls of the army set since she made her debut a few years ago. She has made a host of civilian friends in Honolulu since Colonel Kelly came here on his tour of duty nearly two years ago.

Lieutenant Eubank entered the army from his home state, Texas, at the beginning of the World war. He graduated from his air service school with the class of 1923.

After a honeymoon trip which will be spent on the Montague Cooke estate at Laie they will be at home to their friends about October 1 at the Colonial hotel.

Lieut. Eubank is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Eubank of 2301 Lake Shore drive and is widely known in Port Arthur, having been reared and educated here.

Lieut. Eubank and his wife will probably come to Port Arthur in January for a visit with his parents here.

MRS. GRAY TENDERED CLEANSING SHOWER

Mrs. Frank Edgerton entertained with a pleasing shower Friday afternoon at her home on Fifteenth street honoring her daughter, Mrs. J. A. Gray.

A color motif of pink and white was featured in the home adornment, with pretty blossoms of the season favoring the chosen hues. Games and contests gave diversion during the afternoon, following which the honoree was presented with a number of dainty gifts. Refreshments of punch and cake were served.

Enjoying the afternoon were Mrs. Margaret Bler, Mrs. J. A. Bruton, Mrs. R. R. Yelderman, Mrs. J. A.

House, Mrs. Leon House, Mrs. Dewey Hostie, Mrs. R. L. Tucker, Mrs. Burt Loy, Mrs. J. P. LaRose, Mrs. T. W. Rodgers, Mrs. Lands, Mrs. L. A. Legit, Mrs. A. Youngblood, Mrs. Lawrence Whipple, Mrs. T. D. Hoagland, Mrs. J. A. Gray and Mrs. Frank Edgerton.

MISS HENDRICKSON ENTERTAINS CLUB

Miss Maude Hendrickson graciously entertained the Jus Tus club Thursday evening at her home, 648 Orange avenue, Thursday evening.

The home was prettily adorned for the evening, and during the evening the guests enjoyed chatting and needlework. The hostess offered a dainty salad course during the late hours of the evening.

Those enjoying the charming affair were Miss Audrey Byrd, Miss Juanita Bean, Mrs. Floy Praska, Miss Madeline Ronshausen, Miss Elizabeth Melton, Miss Sylvia Jacobs, Miss Maude Hendrickson and Mrs. A. V. Corley.

Miss Peggy Jacobs will be the club's hostess next week at her home, 1809 Eighth street.

Secret Wedding Announced At Party Friday

An unusually pleasing affair of Friday evening was the "wienner roast" given by the Gleaners class of the First Christian church on the lawn of Mrs. Henry P. Foote's home, 1826 Ninth street, with a delightful surprise coming during the latter part of the evening in the announcement of the marriage of Miss Lou Ella Youngblood and Mrs. E. W. Kasper, members of the class, which took place on July 25.

The wedding was solemnized at Kountze, the only witness being Roy Tarver of that city, an intimate friend of the groom. Mrs. Kasper is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Youngblood of 3025 Ninth street. Mrs. Kasper, who was formerly of Giddings, Texas, is well known in Port Arthur and is an employee of the Gulf Refining company. Mr. and Mrs. Kasper are temporarily at home to their friends at 3025 Ninth street.

The surprise announcement was made during the early part of the evening, and after the congratulations the guests enjoyed a wienner roast on the back lawn. Roasted wieners, rolls, pickles and mustard were served. Delightful outdoor games were enjoyed during the remainder of the evening, the feature of which was the auction sale, which was conducted by Miss Lorae Fears, netting a neat little sum for the treasury, and the mock marriage and divorce case, both of which afforded much amusement for the young people during the evening.

Those enjoying the pleasing occasion were Misses Helen McCurdy, Lorae Fears, Alma Garrett, Imogene Smith, Lydia Gene Phelan, Rita Thompson, Gladys Garrett, Altha Talley, Christine Varnado, Margaret Handley and Dovie Warner, Messrs. Frank Durham, Curtis Lacey, Jr., E. McInnis, C. G. Park, Lester Knight, Robert E. Frenley, L. G. Douglas, A. I. Baker and E. R. Small; Mrs. Lloyd Eldridge, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin W. Kasper and Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Foote.

Kasper and Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Foote.

MRS. O. L. MORTON ENTERTAINS

The younger members of Mrs. O. L. Morton's classes were enjoyably entertained on Saturday morning at the Morton Studio.

After a pleasing little studio recital, two tables of players enjoyed progressive musical games and the winners received dainty prizes. The refreshment service consisted of a delicious ice course.

On next Saturday afternoon Mrs. Morton will entertain the Intermediate members at her home at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Dunlop Entertains At Supper

Mrs. C. S. Dunlop entertained with a charming informal supper last evening at her home, 1848 Fifth street, in honor of the birthday anniversary of her daughter, Miss Frances Dunlop.

An artistic butterfly motif was displayed in the home adornment, with gay, airy butterflies perched at vantage points about the rooms, and showing in charming relief against the background and bankings of green foliage. The dainty favors presented the guests featured the butterfly theme.

Covers were laid for sixteen, each table being centered with a graceful arrangement of foliage and butterflies with the exception of the honor guest's table, which was graced with a beautiful birthday cake on which gleamed twenty small candles.

Covers were laid for Mrs. F. Y. Low and son, Frank; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Patrick, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Sawyer of Springfield, Ill., Mrs. Thomas Davis of Tampico; Major and Mrs. C. H. Fitz-Gerald and daughters, Geraldine and Iona; Lawrence Dermody, Henry Dunlop, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Dunlop, and the honor guest, Miss Frances Dunlop.

"MEASURING PARTY" PLANNED FOR THURSDAY

A pleasing event of the coming week is the "Measuring Party," which will be given on next Thursday evening by the W. R. A. of the Macabees at the home of Mrs. P. A. Dryer, 2412 Sixth street.

The entertainment is being given for the purpose of raising funds for the expense fund of the Waco club, which is comprised of members of the drill team who are attempting to raise enough money to attend the state meet to be held in Waco in November.

The program, which is being arranged for the evening, will be of an elaborate nature, and will consist of various entertaining features. Mrs. P. A. Dryer, Mrs. Dewey Hostie and Mrs. C. J. Rusling will have charge of the arrangements for the affair.

All members of the Macabees, their husbands and friends are invited to attend Thursday evening's entertainment.

TATAPUCHON CAMP FIRE ENTERTAINED

Mrs. C. W. Litherland entertained the Tatapuchon Camp Fire Friday evening at her home in the Mode Addition.

In a most amusing hat making contest Lila Dycus received the first prize and the booty fell to Clara Mae Richardson. Other delightful games and contests were enjoyed during the evening, and at a short business session the camp fire work was discussed by the girls. Tempting refreshments of ice cream, cake and candies were served.

Those present were Lila Dycus, Johanna Ryssenens, Maurine Shivers, Ellen Dorsey, Beatrice Johnson, Katherine Hunt, Virginia Abshire, Clara Mae Richardson, Charley Mae Abington, Dorothy Jordan, Eleanor Wall, Mary Keith, Mary Litherland, Jane Litherland and Mrs. C. W. Litherland.

ORANGE VISITORS IN PORT ARTHUR

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Joiner and daughter, Mamie Anna, and Mrs. D. C. Giddens and children, Marie Julia and Joseph of Orange are visiting Mrs. F. R. Edgerton of 549 East Seventeenth street.

T. C. COTTE TO TYLER

T. C. Cottle, who has been visiting his niece, Mrs. F. R. Edgerton of 549 East Seventeenth street, left yesterday for Tyler to spend the winter before returning to his home in Orange.

DANCING CLASSES AT PLAZA HOTEL

Althea M. Terry, an instructor in dancing from the Hallie R. Pritchard school of dancing at Houston, is conducting a class in ball room dancing at the Plaza hotel.

Mrs. Folse Entertains At Bridge

Naming as honor guests Mrs. E. A. Bowie of New Orleans and Mrs. E. A. Rossi of Beaumont, Mrs. M. P. Folse entertained with a charmingly appointed bridge Friday afternoon.

A pink and green theme was effectively featured in the home adornment, with lovely pink blossoms giving floral beauty and the chosen hues being displayed in the bridge table accessories. Bud vases, each holding a delicate pink blossom, centered each table.

Three tables of players enjoyed the games in which Mrs. Gilbert Root received the prize for high score and Mrs. C. H. Fitz-Gerald was awarded the low score favor. A dainty ice course was offered after the games, the ices reflecting the favored theme.

Preceding the afternoon diversion of bridge, Mrs. Folse entertained with a lovely one o'clock luncheon, covers being laid for the honor guests, Miss Mildred Root and Mrs. Folse.

The players for the afternoon were Mrs. H. B. Paggi, Mrs. A. L. Carter, Mrs. J. P. Nelson, Mrs. Kyle Dowdy, Mrs. A. G. Stanton, Mrs. C. H. Fitz-Gerald, Mrs. Earl Borden, Mrs. Gilbert Root, Mrs. J. C. Brennan, the honor guests, Mrs. E. A. Bowie and Mrs. E. A. Rossi, and the hostess, Mrs. M. P. Folse.

Young Peoples Societies CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR (First Baptist Church)

Miss Gladys Garrett will sponsor the program at the C. E. meeting this evening at 6:30 o'clock.

"Getting Things Organized" is the subject of the program, and several novel features will be introduced by the leader during the evening.

A cordial invitation is extended all young people of the city to attend the C. E. meeting.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR (First Presbyterian Church)

"Getting Things Organized," will be the subject of an interesting and somewhat unusual program this evening at the Presbyterian C. E. meeting at 6:30 o'clock. Fred W. Johnson, president, will lead the meeting.

The program will be in the form of a conference session with the various divisions of the society outlining their plans for the next six months.

Mr. Johnson will tell the plans of the executive committee; Miss Esther Crampton will tell of the finances of the society, and Miss Gertrude Suebold will speak of the publicity aims. Mr. and Mrs. K. L. Goss, members of the prayer-meeting committee, will discuss their work and D. W. Barron, assisted by Misses Margaret Woods and Edith Davis, will tell of the missionary plans of the society. The lookout committees work will

DALEY'S

Don't Worry About Monday We Will Be Open All Day

Monday would be a good day to come and get acquainted with your local, resident, citizen and American firm with American ideals. We don't resort to lies nor trickery to get your money.

We sell only "first quality" shoes and hosiery. We have no job-lots, nor bankrupt junk to offer you at a price.

Try our Iron Clad hosiery for men, women and children, every pair guaranteed. Just buy one pair, then you will become our regular customer.

Leave your shoe and hosiery money in Port Arthur by patronizing us. We spend it here among you. We do not have to remit your every dollar to some foreign head office.

The refineries and other interests turn loose thousands of dollars here twice a month and you rush to the foreign-owned chain and syndicate stores and have them to send it out of Port Arthur. How can you expect your property to increase in value, or Port Arthur to ever grow while you continue to do this?

When you spend money, ask yourself if it will do Port Arthur any good or will you ever get a chance to see that money again.

We give you quality, style and a fit for less. We also give you courtesy, service and satisfaction.

Keep your shoe and hosiery money here.
